

Pa. Senate votes to raise personal, business taxes

HARRISBURG (UPI) — The Senate broke a six-month tax increase deadlock Thursday by narrowly passing a $153 million increase in personal and business taxes.

The tax hikes, combined with a $47 million new utility tax and budget cuts the Senate plans to enact next week, will provide the $300 million that Pennsylvania's 31 state-related educational institutions have been waiting for since July 1.

The proposal passed 26-23, precisely the number of "yes" votes needed.

It must still win the approval of the House and Gov. Milton Shapp before it becomes law.

The House was expected to begin debate on the tax proposal Monday. Senate Majority Leader Henry Messinger, D-Lehigh, said he was optimistic the plan would pass.

"I think it has a good chance in the House, it really does. I don't think they will have a prolonged fight," Messinger said.

The breakthrough in the Senate's struggle to increase taxes came early Thursday when Senate Democratic leaders and three staunch opponents to new taxes agreed on the proposal.

Sen. Thomas Nolan, D-Allegheny, and Quentin Orlando, D-Erie, opponents of the budget the leadership pushed through the legislature last summer, switched from "no" to "yea."

"No longer am I going to stand and butt my head against a stone wall," Nolan said. "I have fought a long time and this is the best we can do."

Sen. J. Doyle Corman, a Republican whose district includes Penn State, supplied the other key vote.

"I think they're (Democrats) playing games with the budget and I want to end the games. I have to try to protect my district and Penn State is the heart of it," said Corman, R-Centre.

Six Senate Democrats voted against the plan. Corman and Sen. Charles Dougherty of Philadelphia were its only GOP supporters.

The fragile agreement was almost shattered Thursday afternoon by heavy lobbying by business.

"They came by the busload as soon as they heard," was the way one senator described attempts by corporations to kill the plan. They said the 1.5 percent increase in the CNI tax was unfair to businesses and would chase investors from Pennsylvania.

Seven members of the Democratic caucus who have consistently supported new taxes threatened to withdraw their support for the same reason.

And at one point Thursday the Democratic leaders thought this plan, like many others before it, would be rejected. But the leadership prevailed.

The plan would increase the personal income tax from 2 to 2.1 percent and the corporate net income tax from 9.5 to 11 percent.

The new tax on personal income is expected to cost a family earning $10,000 approximately $10 annually. It would take effect January 1978.

The business tax would be retroactive to January 1977 and would generate about $115 million in new revenues. It also contains a tax break the business community lobbied for estimated to cost $12 million.

Sadat to address Israeli parliament

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — President Anwar Sadat, denounced by his allies and deserted by members of his own cabinet, Friday accepted an invitation to go to Jerusalem this weekend to address the Israeli parliament.

(Related story, page 7)

"I am going," Sadat said upon his return from Damascus and futile talks to win approval of the trip from Syrian President Hafez Assad. "I always mean what I say."

Immediately upon Sadat's return from Damascus, Ismail Fahmi, Sadat's pro-American foreign minister, resigned "because I feel that I can no longer carry out my duties and share the responsibilities under these circumstances."

Sadat first named Mohammed Mahmoud Riad, minister of state for foreign affairs, to succeed Fahmi, but Riad resigned as well in apparent protest over Sadat's visit.

Sadat then named a former professor and current executive at the Al Ahran newspaper, Butros Ghali, a Coptic Christian, to fill both posts.

Within hours of Sadat's acceptance, a bomb exploded at the Egyptian Embassy in Damascus. The Syrian government denounced the attack as a "cowardly act." There was no immediate report of damage or injuries.

Assad said after his meeting with Sadat he was "deeply hurt" over the Egyptian President's decision.

A Syrian government statement later said, "We categorically reject Sadat's announcement and decision to visit Israel and we hold him personally responsible for the repercussions of his decision."

"During Sadat's visit to Damascus, the Syrian government tried to convince the Egyptian leader to change his mind, pointing out the dangers of his intended visit and its negative effects on the Arab cause," the Syrian statement said.

The Fatah Palestinian guerrilla group, issuing its first reaction to Sadat's visit, joined the denunciation. Thus far, only The Sudan, Egypt's African neighbor to the South, has voiced support for Sadat's trip to Israel.

In Jerusalem, Begin said Sadat's visit would not interfere with efforts to reconvene the Geneva Middle East peace talks. Begin also touched on the opposition to Sadat's visit by Egypt's Arab allies.

"There have been some suspicions in the Arab world that we are trying to drive a wedge but this is not true," Begin said. "We shall be very glad to meet all the representatives of the neighboring Arab countries."

Israelis frantically prepare for historic 36-hour visit

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin Thursday told a group of applauding U.S. congressmen that Egyptian President Anwar Sadat will arrive in Jerusalem Saturday night, pray at Al Aksa mosque and speak to the Israeli parliament Sunday.

The announcement drew applause in Israel, where government protocol officials, flag-masters and the Israeli army band began making frantic preparations for the historic, 36-hour visit. Even the worn red carpet at Ben-Gurion airport was ordered dry cleaned.

The visit, arranged through letters delivered by the U.S. embassies in both capitals, will break all precedents in the bitter, 29-year relations between the two nations that fought four wars.

It will be the first Arab-Jewish summit meeting in 58 years and the first in Israel since the founding of the Jewish state in 1948.

Begin told reporters he and Sadat will hold at least one round of talks following the Egyptian leader's prayers at Al Aksa. Another round of talks and a state dinner may be held Sunday night after speeches to the Knesset by both men, he said.

Begin said he did not think he and Sadat would try to negotiate a separate peace treaty and emphasized he was not trying to drive a wedge among the Arab countries. Syria, Palestinians and even members of Sadat's own cabinet have voiced opposition to the visit and two Egyptian ministers quit in protest.

Israeli officials said Sadat will arrive 7:30 p.m. (12:30 p.m. EST) Saturday — after the Jewish sabbath, which ends at sundown — and will leave at 7:30 a.m. Monday (12:30 a.m. EST).

Begin said Sadat will address the 120-member Knesset (parliament) at 4 p.m. (9 a.m. EST) Sunday in either Arabic or English. Arabic and Hebrew are the two official languages of the Knesset and Begin said simultaneous translation would be provided if Sadat speaks Arabic.

The visit will make the first time since Israel captured Old

Jerusalem in the 1967 war that an Arab of Sadat's rank will pray at Al Aksa, the site of the assassination of King Abdullah of Jordan in June, 1951.

Begin said Sadat also may pray at Yad Vashem — the memorial to the estimated 6 million Jews killed by the Nazis before and during World War II.

By night, they have spent about $15,000 in taxpayers' money dining and drinking at Harrisburg's most expensive night spots.

According to Senate records for August through October, members of the Senate also used another $600 in public funds to buy alcoholic beverages, including large quantities of Cutty Sark scotch, from liquor stores.

Members of the Senate also spent $1,100 of the taxpayers' money on lunches in the Senate Dining Room in August.

The total bill: almost $17,000. Virtually all of the money, spent chiefly by Democrats, was drawn from a special "incidental" account by President Pro Tempore Martin Murray, D-Luzerne, or Chief Clerk Thomas Kalman, who was named to his post by the Democratic majority.

Kalman, who is responsible for the "incidental" account, said it is used primarily to pay Capitol cleaning personnel.

Senate Minority Leader Henry Hager, R-Lycorning, spent only $44.84 from his $850,000 leadership account on "legislative dinners."

Some of the dinners were paid for by individual lawmakers with their senatorial expense accounts.

Pa. Senate didn't go hungry during budget balancing act

HARRISBURG (UPI) — By day, the members of the Pennsylvania senate have tried and failed over the last several months to balance the state's budget.

By night, they have spent about $15,000 in taxpayers' money dining and drinking at Harrisburg's most expensive night spots.

According to Senate records for August through October, members of the Senate also used another $600 in public funds to buy alcoholic beverages, including large quantities of Cutty Sark scotch, from liquor stores.

Members of the Senate also spent $1,100 of the taxpayers' money on lunches in the Senate Dining Room in August.

The total bill: almost $17,000. Virtually all of the money, spent chiefly by Democrats, was drawn from a special "incidental" account by President Pro Tempore Martin Murray, D-Luzerne, or Chief Clerk Thomas Kalman, who was named to his post by the Democratic majority.

Kalman, who is responsible for the "incidental" account, said it is used primarily to pay Capitol cleaning personnel.

Senate Minority Leader Henry Hager, R-Lycorning, spent only $44.84 from his $850,000 leadership account on "legislative dinners."

Some of the dinners were paid for by individual lawmakers with their senatorial expense accounts.

While Democrats spent most of the money, one Republican, Sen. Richard Tilghman of Montgomery County, spent $776.26 during the period. On Sept. 19, he charged a lone $1.50 drink at the Maverick Steak House to the taxpayers.

Tilghman was permitted to buy dinners with public funds because he has a leadership account as minority chairman of the Appropriations Committee.

Ann Land, the Senate librarian, also has an account as a Senate officer. She spent $1,398.44 on dinners during the period.

The dinner money was reported in Senate expense reports in August, September and October. However, the figure could go higher because all the expenses for October are not in yet.

Kalman, admitting the expenditures were inordinately high, said the dinners were purchased for the senators during the dog days of the budget crisis.

One of the big restaurant checks — $348.52 — was rung up Aug. 16, the day Gov. Milton Shapp fed bologna sandwiches to the children of welfare recipients who were demonstrating at the Capitol because their welfare checks were held up.

Grocery bills likely to rise next year

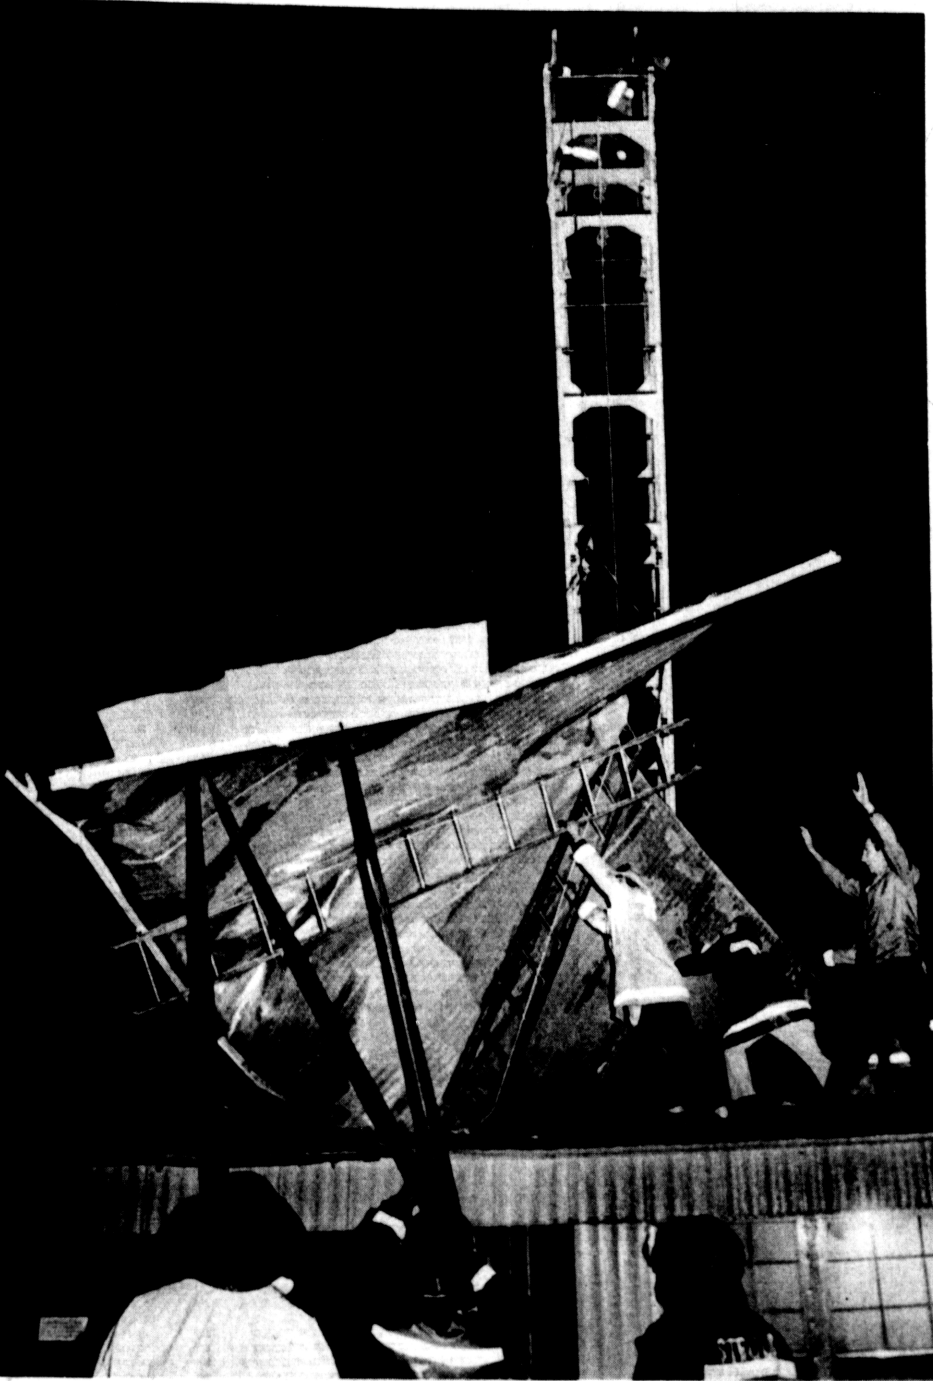

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Americans can expect to pay up to 6 percent more for food next year, due to higher import, labor, packaging and transport costs and to consumer demand for luxury services, the Agriculture Department said Thursday.

That increase is slightly lower than the 6.5 percent price hike in food this year, but above the 3.1 percent increase last year. Food prices rose 14.5 percent in both 1973 and 1974 and were up 8.5 percent in 1975.

The department said its most optimistic prediction for next year is that price hikes could be held to 4 percent, but they are not expected to range above 6 percent in any case.

Kenneth Farrell, head of the Agriculture Department's Economic Research Service, said total spending for food next year is expected to be $224 billion, up from $213 billion this year.

Of next year's total, $188 billion will be for food raised on American farms, he said, but farmers will get only $56.5 billion of that — about the same amount they received for the past five years.

Strong winds cause damage in Monroe

By MIKE JOSEPH
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — Strong winds together with lightning tore the roof off a new house trailer in Stroud Township Thursday, frightening the trailer's occupant and bringing out half a hundred firemen to hoist the roof back to its place.

In the county's West End, Pleasant Valley School District facilities sustained more than $1,000 damage from winds in Thursday's thunderstorm.

The damaged Stroud Township trailer is at 620 Wicac Ave., a block and a half from Fifth Street. "Lightning struck it and the wind blew it (the roof) right over," said Harry Blum, who with his father Max owns the trailer next to their home at 616 Wicac Ave.

Alice Williams, 21, who rents the 70-foot by 14-foot, three-bedroom trailer from the Blums, was inside at about 3:30 p.m. when lightning apparently struck.

"It just sounded like something hit it," she said. "It scared me half to death because I thought the roof was falling in."

She fled the trailer unharmed to find the thinner-than-cardboard aluminum roof peeled back from its fasteners and hanging on the trailer's west side, draping on the ground like an open sardine can.

Blum, who sells trailers similar to the three-bedroom, $14,000 Atlantic Champion, said it was the first time either he or his father has seen wind damage a trailer in more than 20 years of his business.

The thin, 980-square-foot roof had been fastened to the box at the factory with large staples, the usual construction technique, Blum said.

Stroud Township firemen, using ropes and pulleys attached to Stroudsburg fire company's aerial ladder truck, hoisted the roof until the roof's front end buckled.

Six firemen, in an effort that resembled the World War II photograph of U.S. Marines raising the Stars and Stripes at Iwo Jima, pushed the roof over.

"It didn't go as smoothly as we'd hoped it would but the aerial ladder gave us the elevation we needed to get it back on," said Stroud Township Assistance Fire Chief Rick Staples.

Blum could not estimate the damage. The trailer is insured. Alice Williams and Robert Williams will be living with relatives temporarily.

The damage to Pleasant Valley School District property happened at the high school football field, the J. C. Mills Middle School and the high school cafeteria.

School district superintendent John B. Nye said the wind tore half the roof off the football field's press box, overturned a ticket booth which then smashed a fence and bent a light standard.

A piece of wood from the press box sailed more than 100 yards and landed atop the middle school, damaging an exhaust vent.

Another chunk of flying debris dealt damage to a car. Still another missile hit transportation coordinator Robert Block, cutting his leg.

In the high school cafeteria, the wind buckled the in-laid ceiling, breaking several tiles. Nye said he was not certain whether the school's insurance would cover the damage. Regardless, he said, the damage will cost the school at least $1,000, the amount of the insurance policy deductible.

In other parts of the county, the thunderstorm interrupted electric service for 11 Pennsylvania Power & Light customers in Wier Lake near Gilbert. High winds blew trees into wires, knocking the wires down.

Area PP&L manager James Walton also reported that high winds snapped a pole on Silver Valley Drive, Saylorsburg R.D. 2, but no electricity interruptions resulted.

Metropolitan Edison manager Tom Kostenbader reported that about a half dozen residents in south Stroudsburg lost electricity temporarily because high winds damaged wires.

East Stroudsburg weather watcher Ben Gelber said the short but powerful thunderstorm dropped .38 inches of rain between 3:30 p.m. and 5:30 p.m.

In Tobyhanna, weather watcher Mrs. John Grady measured .2 inches of rainfall for the afternoon.

Conferees vote strong federal role in utility rate appeals

WASHINGTON (UPI) — After hours of haggling, a House-Senate conference committee Thursday killed President Carter's proposed reforms of retail utility rates and then voted for a strong federal role in rate appeals.

The negotiators substituted a set of guidelines for Carter's suggested rate reforms and permitted states to accept or reject them.

The agreements, greeted by "thank God" from the conference chairman, Rep. Harley Staggers, D-W.Va., cleared away some of the toughest issues of a utility rate reform bill.

Negotiators traded offers back and forth and finally settled on a plan that would let the secretary of energy appeal a rate case if he is an original party in the case. He and other potential intervenors in cases could turn to federal courts if a state court rejected their right to intervene.

"The ayes have it and thank God for that," Staggers said when both Senate and House negotiators agreed to middle ground on the issue.

In his energy message last spring, Carter asked that Congress force utilities to change the way they make rates.

He wanted promotional bargains in rates to be ended in favor of rates based as closely as possible on cost of service. He also sought special rates for electricity used in off-peak hours of the day or under interruptible conditions — service only when supplies are adequate.

The House energy bill largely went along with that approach. The Senate version did not, substituting a plan whereby federal officials would merely encourage rate reform by participating in state rate cases. Despite the changes the committee made in Carter's plan, Rep. Harley Staggers, the panel chairman, predicted the president could accept the compromise.

The compromise would require state rate-makers to consider 11 federal guidelines, including time-of-day rates, seasonal rates, interruptible rates and prohibition of unjustified bargain rates.

Although those are optional, they would be an unprecedented federal involvement in rate-making — now left to state power commissions — and an opportunity for federal officials and consumers to seek review of state electric rate decisions.

Vietnam postmortem

LEWISTON, Me. (UPI) — The former commander of U.S. military forces in Vietnam claims political dissent and college deferments prolonged America's involvement in the war and hampered U.S. military effectiveness. Retired Gen. William C. Westmoreland, discussing Vietnam with students at Bates College Wednesday night, said, "The dissent was anarchy which prolonged the war. The soldier wanted it ended because it was his life that was on the line, but dissenters were encouraging the enemy to hang on." American forces were hampered by a lack of quality officers due to political decisions on college deferments, which, Westmoreland said, contributed to incidents like the My Lai massacre. "In other wars, the Army drew its officers from colleges," Westmoreland said. "A man like Lt. William Calley was not of officer caliber."

Political marriage

BUFFALO, N. Y. (UPI) — Rep. Shirley Chisholm, D-N.Y., believes she has found the way to cope with the strains a political career can place on a marriage — by marrying a former politician. The 56-year-old Brooklyn congresswoman came to Buffalo to announce Wednesday to take out a marriage license for a Nov. 26 wedding to Arthur Hardwick Jr., 60, a former state assemblyman who now owns a liquor store. It will be the second marriage for both — Mrs. Chisholm is divorced and Hardwick is a widower. "What's beautiful about this pending marriage," Mrs. Chisholm said, "is that, because Mr. Hardwick was a legislator, he recognizes the ups and downs of political life and the importance of it. The thing you have to recognize is both of us are used to traveling a great deal. He understands."

Sick leave

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Air Force Gen. Daniel James, the top-ranking black in the U.S. military, has been put on convalescent leave following "mild coronary difficulties," the Pentagon announced Thursday. James, 57, who has been serving as head of the North American Air Defense Command in Colorado Springs, Colo., is being transferred to Washington to undergo further medical evaluation, the announcement said.

What's news

Wheaties in trouble over ad

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — San Francisco District Attorney Joseph Freitas Jr. filed suit Wednesday in Superior Court charging that Wheaties advertising featuring a testimonial by Bruce Jenner, the Olympic decathlon champion, was unsubstantiated. The suit attacked television and packaging statements that Jenner "downed a lot of Wheaties," known as the "breakfast of champions," in preparing for the Olympics and that "a good breakfast with Wheaties has always been important to me." The district attorney's office said General Mills, the manufacturer, has been repeatedly asked to substantiate the advertising claims and has not done so.

Strike at United Airlines?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Association of Flight Attendants said Thursday a strike is likely to be called this weekend against United Airlines, the nation's largest air carrier. Patricia Robertson, president of the association, said there will have to be more progress in current talks between the union and United to avert a strike by United's 8,000 flight attendants at midnight tonight.

Motorman blamed for 'el' crash

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The National Transportation Safety Board Thursday blamed the lack of "due care" by motorman Stephen Martin for a rush hour elevated train crash that killed 11 persons and injured 260 in Chicago last February. The board voted 4-0 to place probable cause for the accident on Martin's failure to exercise caution and heed Chicago Transit Authority operating rules, and on the unauthorized movement of his train against a flashing red signal. The cab signal warned that another train was stopped a block ahead, on a curve above a busy Loop intersection. Martin's Lake-Dan Ryan express slammed into the halted Ravenswood train, derailing four cars and sending two of them toppling to the street below.

Body found in drum

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (UPI) — The body of Edward Barthow, 16, of Allentown RD, was found Thursday inside a 55-gallon drum in the woods behind his home. Police said that when he was found, Barthow's hands were tied behind his back and there was a bag over his head. His body had been placed upside down in the drum. Salisbury Township police said they believed Barthow was murdered but they do not know how he was slain. His body was taken to Sacred Heart Hospital for an autopsy.

Security for women expensive

HOUSTON (UPI) — Bella Abzug estimated Thursday at least $40,000 in federal funds will be spent to maintain order between opposing factions — feminists and conservatives — at the National Women's Conference. Ms. Abzug, a leading feminist who will preside over the four-day meeting beginning today, said she hopes to avoid any disruption. But she emphasized: "We are not afraid of controversy."

Food costs dip slightly

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Agriculture Secretary Kent Shelhamer said Thursday that Pennsylvanians paid slightly less for the average retail food basket in October than in the previous month. A statewide survey showed that the average cost for 14 selected supermarket items cost $10.67, down nine cents from September's $10.76. "The continued downward trend is a mixed blessing," said Shelhamer. "Our consumers are getting more food at a lower price but our farmers are not benefiting from their labor. Farm prices are down but production costs are still on the rise and our farmers are losing money as a result," he said.

State jobless rate unchanged

HARRISBURG (UPI) — The unemployment rate in Pennsylvania remained unchanged at 6.7 percent in October, according to the Bureau of Employment Security. Total unemployment was estimated at 295,000. The seasonally unadjusted rate remained the same from September at 5.8 percent. The unemployment rate was down 1.3 percent from October 1976.

Millionaire acquitted of murder

AMARILLO, Texas (UPI) — Jurors who discounted the credibility of prosecution witnesses, went without sleep and prayed for guidance, Thursday found Fort Worth millionaire T. Cullen Davis innocent of the shooting death of his 12-year-old stepdaughter, Andrea Wilborn.

After 13 weeks of testimony and arguments, the jury hearing Texas' longest murder trial deliberated only four hours and 13 minutes before announcing their decision.

"I can't explain how it feels," Davis said with tears in his eyes. "I saw someone else with tears in their eyes and I couldn't control myself."

Davis, 44, embraced Karen Master, 29, the woman who provided his alibi, was processed out of jail and drove away with her to an undisclosed site. His attorneys Wednesday posted bond on one murder charge and two attempted murder charges still pending against him.

In Fort Worth, Jack Wilborn, Andrea's father, was bitter at the verdict.

"The thought that he had a good relationship with Andrea, which had been projected throughout the trial, is completely false," Wilborn said. "Andrea was very much afraid of Cullen. She wouldn't even go visit her mother (Priscilla) for months before they (Davis and Priscilla) were separated."

"There was so much evidence that didn't come out in the trial about their relationship. I was very disappointed."

After the verdict was announced, reporters gathered at the Fort Worth mansion where the murder occurred but Mrs. Davis refused to come out. Her chauffeur said she was too upset to talk with anyone. Judy McCrory, her best friend, said Mrs. Davis learned of the verdict through a telephone call from Amarillo and had spent the afternoon crying.

Pentagon orders more missiles

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Defense Department has decided to order another $105 million worth of Minuteman III strategic missiles and will keep the production line, scheduled to shut down, open after all.

The Pentagon announced in July it was ending production of the land-based strategic missile but it now has notified Congress contract action was taken earlier this week to keep the assembly line at Hill Air Force Base, Utah, open to turn out an additional 30 Minutemen.

The missile, which is built by the Boeing Corp. of Seattle, is the most accurate in the nation's strategic arsenal.

A total of 550 Minutemen III are now in launch silos in addition to 504 older models. The Defense Department now has between 120 and 130 more Minutemen III in storage but there are now no plans to increase the number in silos.

Complacency helping polio spring up again

By United Press International
Fear and complacency today threaten to undo the pioneer work of Dr. Jonas Salk who in 1955 produced a vaccine which in a large measure eliminated the crippling disease — poliomyelitis.

Between 1943 and 1953 polio had reached epidemic proportions in the United States.

In 1955, however, Salk produced with spectacular success the vaccine which almost eliminated the disease then generally called infantile paralysis.

Now, for the first time in years, cases are being confirmed in several states — an unidentified woman dead in New York, a child stricken in Texas, a woman infected in Maryland, three cases in Minnesota.

Some health officials find the potential disturbing, although at present there are only a small number of cases and, in view of the fact so many people are immunized, no one is worried that there might be an epidemic.

Abercrombie & Fitch bargain-hunter

'Store of stars' shutting down

NEW YORK (UPI) — An 83-year-old California man sat on a radiator inside the doors of Abercrombie & Fitch Co. Thursday as tens of thousands ringed the store on the first day of its $8.5 million going-out-of-business sale.

"It's first come, first serve," a police sergeant told the throngs outside the sporting emporium once frequented by statesmen and kings. "But every once in a while we have to make an exception," he explained as he helped the stooped Californian through the police barricades to the front door.

The exceptional in both merchandise and service was Abercrombie's stock-in-trade for 84 years. It catered to every U.S. president this century except Jimmy Carter and sold lavish sports equipment to King Hussein of Jordan and gold inlaid shotguns to King Farouk of Egypt.

"I've heard about Abercrombie's all my life," said the elderly sportsman from Monrovia, Calif., who would not give his name. "I don't plan to shop, but I'll just sit here until my daughter gets to the head of the line and can show me the store."

Old-guard Abercrombie customers, whose names read like an international Who's Who, were noticeably absent in the orderly lines dotted with greyflannel suits, backpacks and Texas and Virginia accents. The lines encircled one city block and the streets were jammed with curious motorists.

"This is an event, the passing of an era," said Fran Funt, a New York artist, who arrived at 10:30 p.m. Wednesday and camped out in a sleeping bag at Abercrombie's headquarters on Madison Avenue and 45th Street.

By 5:45 a.m., Frank Davidson 3rd, a Lynchburg, Va. lawyer, had joined the growing line. "I want to buy anything I can afford to keep as a memento," he said.

At 8 a.m. the doors opened. Shoppers jammed the elevators and jogged up the fire stairs. Crowds swelled in the luggage, sporting and fishing departments, and customers queued up 30-deep in front of the cash registers.

Many loyal Abercrombie employees were disillusioned by the sale, however. "This is a shabby way of closing," a 19-year veteran of the jewelry department said as he pointed to the "Closing Our Doors" signs on every wall. "They promised us we'd go out in dignity, and this certainly isn't dignity."

Encouraging reports on economy continue

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Commerce Department Thursday continued to report good economic news, estimating the gross national product stripped of inflation rose 4.7 percent during the summer.

Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps said the latest report was "encouraging," but still would not settle the issue of whether a tax cut might be needed next year to stimulate economic growth.

President Carter is reported to be planning a weekend review of Treasury Department recommendations for income tax reductions that can be enacted quickly, if necessary, without major controversy over reforms.

Commerce said GNP rose 4.7 percent to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $1.346 trillion in the third quarter. This was a faster pace than the preliminary estimate in October that set the GNP expansion at 3.8 percent — too slow to trim the ranks of seven million unemployed.

The upward revisions included a $4 billion increase in goods sold to foreign countries and a $3.3 billion expansion of business inventories — goods ready for immediate sale to manufacturers, wholesalers and consumers.

Mrs. Kreps said "consumer spending and capital investment were still disappointing." The GNP revision was the latest in a series of November reports suggesting steady economic expansion for the rest of the year.

Construction of new homes and apartments is at a four-year peak. Individual income from wages, investments and transfer payments and retail sales have posted impressive gains.

Carter, shah made no oil price deals

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter made no specific deals to win the Shah of Iran's support for an oil price freeze, but he is determined to keep Iran militarily strong, press secretary Jody Powell said Thursday.

The shah, who left for Paris Wednesday after a two-day state visit marred by demonstrations, announced he would support a one-year price freeze among oil exporters even though Carter did not guarantee him the weaponry he wants.

But he expressed confidence he would eventually get the jet fighters, radar planes and other armaments on his list, and Powell's remarks suggested he has good reason to think so.

At a briefing, the press secretary said Carter had given no specific "quid pro quo" — meaning no final arms sale agreements in return for the shah's change of heart on the oil price issue.

But he added: "We consider our relationship with Iran to be extremely important. We recognize their strategic importance to this country. All one has to do is look at a map of that region of the world to understand that quite clearly."

Iran's neighbors include the Soviet Union and Iraq, an Arab nation especially hostile to the United States.

"We intend to support a strong defensive military posture for Iran," Powell said. "I think it was his correct impression that we do value their relationship ... There is an understanding and a commitment to support an adequate defense of that nation."

Carter made clear in a statement issued after his final meeting with the shah, however, that he needs congressional support for further arms sales.

As for the oil issue, Powell said, "the decision on the part of the shah to work actively against an oil price increase is an encouraging one, and we appreciate and find it welcome news."

Warnke predicts arms curb pact

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Paul Warnke, the chief U.S. arms negotiator, predicted Thursday the United States and the Soviet Union will conclude a new strategic arms agreement early next year.

"Very substantial difficulties remain to be negotiated," Warnke said in an interview, but the bulk of the work has been completed in the strategic arms limitation talks dating from mid-1972.

Asked when he thought a SALT II accord might be ready for signing by President Carter and Soviet President

Leonid Brezhnev, Warnke replied, "It would not be unreasonable to look toward the first half of 1978."

The pact would then need ratification by the Senate, where it faces opposition from conservatives who believe, on the basis of leaked reports on the negotiations, that the United States is giving away too much in its drive to limit U.S. and Soviet strategic missiles and bombers.

Warnke said Congress has a legitimate role in advising him on the negotiations, but added, "It would be unwise to be in a position where Congress directs your negotiations. I don't deny the Senate's legitimate interest in the negotiations, but they can't take them over."

His prediction on when the pact may be concluded would also mean the Senate ratification process could take place in the midst of congressional election campaigns.

He said that doesn't worry him and he does not think SALT would become a campaign issue.

"It would be a very simple debate," he said. "What's the alternative to this treaty? I can't see any reasonable man coming to any alternative conclusions."

"We believe that the presence of large numbers of Cubans in Africa is bound to have an unsettling effect and a threat to peace in Africa."

He said the United States has advised Cuba, presumably through the new diplomatic observer posts each nation has just opened in the other's capital, that its African military buildup "inevitably will have an impact on the pace and even on the possibility of normalizing relations with Cuba."

Cuba-U.S. relations take turn for worse

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The State Department told Cuba Thursday it has killed chances for further improvement in relations, for now, by sending more troops to Africa when it promised to withdraw some.

The move reflected President Carter's displeasure with Cuba's "colonial" style military buildup in Africa, which he expressed in an interview last Friday.

"In light of the developments of increased Cuban activity in Africa," State Department spokesman Hodding Carter III said, "it would appear that we have gone as far as we can go toward normalization at this time."

He confirmed that the National Security Council now estimates there are about 27,000 Cuban advisers, most of them military men, stationed mainly in Angola but also in 16 other African nations.

"We are concerned and we have raised that matter directly with the Cubans," the department spokesman said.

Last spring, he said, "the Cubans had let us know that they intended to decrease their military presence in Angola. Instead, they have only increased their presence there."

Apparel industry fights naked competition from imports

By JEFF WIDMER
Pocono Record Reporter
WIND GAP — Apparel manufacturers in the Slate Belt and the Pocono Mountains have found themselves in a dilemma.
They are caught in a cycle that has affected other major American industries like steel and auto production. It's called foreign competition. And it's costing jobs.
People now buy foreign clothing in record amounts. Imports affecting the women's and children's apparel industry ran $2.475 billion in 1976, according to the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union. That figure is up from $304 million in 1961.
Imports have also taken more and more of the domestic market each year, rising from 3.9 percent of the domestic output in 1961 to 31.1 percent in 1976, the union says.
It appears as imports go up, jobs go down. The Atlantic Apparel Contractors' Association Inc. of Wind Gap, representing 365 manufacturers in Northeastern Pennsylvania, reports 49,000 textile-related jobs were lost in Pennsylvania between 1966 and 1975 because of imports.
Alarmed at the competition, more than 1,000 union members rallied to protest imports at the Blue Valley Farm Show Building near Bangor last April.
A month later, association officials presented their statistics to the Pennsylvania delegation of congressmen and senators in Washington.
Since then, the association has continued its effort to modernize local apparel plants, according to association General Manager Arnold Delin.
Delin said the association's engineers visit factories to help update equipment and see that workers use it speedily. The association seeks to introduce automation — machines that combine steps like trimming and stitching, he said.
But there are more intangible obstacles. Delin said worker pride and consumer attitude are two.
Delin said there is little employers can do about pride, except to pay workers a decent wage. He has taken to the media to solve the other problem, that of trying to convince consumers they can buy an item of the same quality, style and price from American manufacturers as from a foreign source.
He said he understands families today look for lower prices when shopping for clothing and are therefore attracted to foreign-made goods. But he said if you depend on an American industry for your livelihood, it would behoove you to buy American-made goods first.
Delin is a realist when it comes to imports. He would just like to hold the line at 50 percent, a point where no more than half of the apparel items are imported.
"I think the battle on imports is lost," he said. "We might be placated by Washington." But, because of international politics, he said "It's impossible to say 'No more imports.'"
The contractors' association, in its May report to Pennsylvania congressmen, suggested Congress limit the rise in imports to either three percent a year or the actual rise in total domestic production during the previous year.
Atlantic also would like a change in the interpretation of a section of the nation's tariff schedules. The association feels Item 807 of the schedules should be amended so garments cut in the United States cannot be sewn abroad without tariff being payable on the value of the entire garment.
Atlantic said since only five percent of apparel workers here perform operations in and around the cutting room, 19 out of 20 jobs are lost when American goods are sent abroad to be sewn.
Atlantic estimates the decline in employment in its trade within Pennsylvania to be 27 percent from 1966-76. The association represents 365 members owning more than 400 factories and employing in excess of 40,000 persons. Delin estimated 30 percent of those employees work in the Slate Belt.
Area factories also face competition from manufacturers who have located in the Sun Belt, Delin said. But he believes prices of goods made there will rise as the new minimum wage law boosts labor costs in those non-union shops.
Yet tax concessions to those companies and worker training programs in southern states still give Sun Belt manufacturers the edge, he said.
The government here is not about to set up training programs because, Delin said, "We're still considered a second-class industry because we employ women."
"The apparel industry has long been the lifeline of many homes," he said, noting that when coal, cement and slate industries faded, "The women went to work (in the apparel shops) to put food on the table. If it wasn't for the needle industry, God knows what would have happened."

P.V. moves to improve elementary reading program

BRODHEADSVILLE — The faculties of the three elementary schools in the Pleasant Valley School District have entered the implementation stage of a special state-sponsored program designed to improve the reading program for kindergartners through fourth graders in the district.
Teachers and administrators have been working for 15 months now on a comprehensive review of the district's elementary reading curriculum as part of their participation in the Pennsylvania School Improvement Program (PSIP).
The objective of the program, funded by the federal government and coordinated by the state Department of Education through the Colonial Northampton Intermediate Unit 20, is to help schools analyze their needs in the basic skills area and then to help them design a program which will help meet those needs.
What is unique about this program is that rather than having outside government officials or even the higher levels of the school district administration tell the teachers how they were going to improve the programs which they teach, the teachers have had virtually total control over every aspect of the review and decision making process, according to elementary principal Harrie Blood.
Teachers from each of the schools, assistant to the superintendent Charles Arnold and Blood began meeting with officials from the state education department in January, 1976.
The first step, he explained, was for the teachers to establish what they thought were reasonable and responsible goals for the school district with its reading program.
"This wasn't a case of the state coming in and telling us what we should be trying to do. We were forced to make all the decisions," Mrs. Georgia Smith, a third grade teacher at Polk Elementary School explained. She said that the members of the "School Assistance Team" (SAT) from the state were present only to help the teachers decide and pinpoint precisely what they are after.
While the teachers were making these decisions, the state, through several private research groups, was gathering information on a large list of possible programs which could be implemented in the district.
After the two sets of information were gathered, a selection process was begun. Each of the proposed problems was reviewed in terms of about 10 different criteria including lack of racial or sexual bias, cost, implementation time and the amount of in-service time which was required to train teachers to use the new program.
"The advantage that we had in this step, was that we had all the research reports on the various programs prepared at no cost to us. Also, all the programs we looked at have worked somewhere else. We didn't have to be guinea pigs," Blood explained.
The selection process was concluded at the in-service day held Oct. 14. At that time, all the elementary teachers were allowed to vote on the proposed program and give them priority ratings.
The teachers voted at that time to place high priority on better management and coordination of the existing reading programs.
The studies of the existing reading curriculum in the elementary schools showed that the current program is basically sound and achieving satisfactory results, Blood said.
He explained, however, that the teachers felt some of the younger students are weaker than they should be in the areas of reading comprehension and in eye-motor coordination, the ability to reproduce letters or words they see before them.
The new management program which will be implemented as a result of the study will include a series of diagnostic and achievement tests to better monitor the students' progress in this area, Blood said.
According to Mrs. Smith, the third grade teacher, the faculty involved in the many meetings which have been held during the 15 months have been "tremendously impressed" with the help they have received from state and intermediate unit officials.
"They've really guided us along and let us make all the decisions. I think the program will work a lot better than others because all the decisions have been made at the grass roots by the teachers," she said.
Arnold agreed and added that he could not remember a study project in recent years which has generated as much enthusiasm from the teachers.
Blood said that he is proud of the fact that the program has generated sufficient interest that "the number three person" in the U.S. Office of Education came to observe the work sessions held during the summer.
He explained that the official was in the area to view several of the districts involved in the program — there are 10 in the state — but that "it was exciting to have those important people here."

Arnold explained that another benefit is that both administrators and teachers have learned how to evaluate their own program and in the future will be better equipped to do so on their own.

N.Y. to follow pipeline impact

OTTAWA NEWS SERVICE
Albany Bureau
ALBANY — The state's Public Service Commission (PSC) says it's prepared to back New York's environmental protection laws with muscle when construction begins on a 574-mile long natural gas pipeline from Canada to Milford.
A judge at the Federal Power Commission (FPC) has given Tenneco Atlantic Pipeline Company (TAPCO) the green light to start construction on the Calais, Me. to Albany, N.Y. leg of the 36-inch underground pipeline.
But officials at the PSC, which tried to block the pipeline's construction, say construction must comply with the state's environmental standards.
"We're prepared to see to it that they protect the environment," PSC spokesman Francis Rivett said Wednesday. "They will comply with New York state's environmental standards."
PSC official Robert L. Horn had called the pipeline project "the Northeast's version of the Alaska pipeline," during hearings before the FPC.
Horn said environmental quality will be jeopardized unless "adequate" measures are taken to protect and preserve it.
Horn was reported out of town and could not be reached for comment.
However, Rivett said the federal approval stipulates that "Tenneco follows our guidelines. The route has to satisfy us."
Rivett said that any disputes between New York state and the pipeline firm will be worked out by federal authorities.
The liquefied natural gas pipeline will pass through the Catskills along the general line of Route 209. The route will cross the Bushkill and the Delaware River and would terminate at an existing Tenneco pipeline northeast of Milford.
The Calais to Albany section is slated for completion by late 1981 and the Albany to Milford leg should be done by late 1983, the FPC said.

Random violence a sign of dissolution in our time?

One spring day in 1924 two young college students of prominent and well-to-do Chicago families, both with brilliant academic records and unblemished reputations, kidnapped and killed the 13-year-old son of a neighboring family, equally prominent and well-to-do.

The crime of Nathan Leopold Jr. and Richard Loeb stunned the world. For months thereafter the investigation and subsequent trial and conviction made front page news everywhere.

Several things made the Leopold and Loeb case a worldwide sensation. First there was the background of the two young men; no ordinary criminals they. Then the fact that it seemed a senseless, irrational murder done with incomprehensible coldness and cruelty.

Finally, the sense of horror grew from the fact that, at this particular moment in time, this kind of crime seemed a rarity, if not unique.

Violence has never been a stranger to this country. Murders have always happened somewhere every day, some from passion, some from greed, some from smoldering grievances, some simply from flare-ups of angry quarrels. Here, so it seemed to a horrified people, was something different. Here was murder seemingly done only for kicks, the victim chosen seemingly without cause.

All that was a long time ago. You cannot help wondering whether, if it happened today, it could week after week rivet

VERMONT ROYSTER

Thinking things over the country's attention. Or would it be now just another one-day sensation?

In comparing the climate of one era with another it isn't easy to distinguish between appearance and reality. A half-century ago the crime of Leopold and Loeb may not have been as rare as it seemed; crime statistics are poor anyway, and at best they give only numbers.

But one thing is clear. The public perception of violent crime has changed.

Of late years we have been surfeited with wanton murders of random victims, their motives irrational to rational minds. They retain their power to horrify for a moment, but one comes too close upon the heels of another to hold our attention.

This is not, of course, the only violence endemic to our times. There are those terrorists. Those who slaughter in Olympic villages, hijack airplanes and murder pilots in cold blood or blow up restaurants to spread death by lottery.

The terrorists claim a motive; they say they wish to make some political point, dramatize a cause or blackmail some government. But here too there is a difference from the familiar political assassins. The victims are not the kings, presidents or dictators against whom they claim grievance. Their victims are as unknown to them as those of the Son of Sam.

What makes this disturbing is not just the number of people killed. More die daily in crimes of passion or of greed. The number is trivial compared with those who die in war or at the hands of a Chairman Mao or an Idi Amin. What disturbs is the special way this kind of violence tears at the social fabric. The peaceable citizen cannot be sure when he walks the streets that he may not become an innocent victim, that when he boards an airplane he may not end up a hostage to this madness.

The terrorists, indeed, make no secret of their purpose. Their avowed aim is social chaos. Their war is against not one government but civilized order itself. The other random killers, if not so purposeful, bear witness to the thinness of the veneer of civilization, the tenuous shield that separates us from the jungle.

More disturbing yet, many of these crimes aren't committed by the usual scum of any society. From the Manson family to the Baader-Meinhof gang the participants — like Leopold and Loeb — are often well educated, from good family and cultural backgrounds, those upon whom civilization depends.

In short, our times are not just times of violence — perhaps in total less so than in other eras — but of a special kind of violence, spurred by neither greed nor passion but mindless and coldblooded.

If you ask me why this is so, I do not know. You can feel it is somehow related to other rifts in the social fabric, the abandonment of sexual restraints, the breakdown of the family, the spread of political disorder, the growing use of drugs to escape the disciplines of life. But even if this is so, it raises as many questions as it answers.

For then we are left to wonder about the nature of the human animal, what makes and keeps him civilized. Alfred North Whitehead once remarked that civilization always stands upon the razor's edge between preservation and destruction. The reminder here is that it can be tipped not only by wars and pestilence but from inside man himself.

To be sure, it is easy to exaggerate. Every age thinks itself the worst of times, while man's inhumanity to man is a constant of history. But however that may be, we've certainly passed the time when one irrational murder of a schoolboy could hold the world in the grip of horror.

Performance misplaced

The Shah of Iran said nothing publicly about the violent demonstration that greeted his arrival at the White House, but we imagine his private comments were blistering, centered around the conviction that, by golly, such a thing couldn't happen in his country.

It couldn't, of course, which is why the demonstrators were demonstrating. There was no need for the violence that ensued, however, and the tear gas that enveloped the shah and President Carter as they spoke words of welcome and gratitude at each other in the Rose Garden.

Observers said it was the first time there had been such a disruption of a White House state ceremony. Even in the heyday of anti-Vietnam war protests, there was not such a violent outburst — even though the magnitude of the Vietnam protests far surpassed Tuesday's anti-shah gathering.

The protestors for the most part were the shah's fellow countrymen — those who have either fled Iran or who are American citizens of Iranian descent. Their protest was that the Shah of Iran is a fascist. They might have added the shah is a feudal ruler who encourages barbaric practices and repression to an alarming degree. While no Genghis Khan, the shah is no George Washington either.

Which leads one to wonder why Carter, the defender of human rights, was welcoming this dark-ages ruler to the White House.

The answer, in two parts, is oil and Middle East tensions. The shah controls each situation to a great degree. Our great and good friend, Saudi Arabia, cannot see to our interests all by itself, so the closer we are to Iran and Egypt, the better our chances are of status quo at least in respect to oil supplies and quasi-peace among Middle East nations.

Obviously, then, the President has learned to compromise some ideals for a desirable goal in the foreign relations arena. With admirable restraint, the President withstood the clouds of tear gas and obscene shouts of the anti-shah crowd to adhere to protocol and impress the shah with the firm intentions of the United States.

Whether or not you agree with the President's policy goal or his methods, you have to appreciate the performance. We just wonder when President Carter will perform as admirably in winning concessions on domestic issues from Congress, which has yet to resort to tear gas but which is as recalcitrant as were those demonstrators.

Conservative peace

Much as it took the Red-baiting Richard Nixon to establish diplomatic relations between the United States and the People's Republic of China, so has it taken the conservative, orthodox, hard-line Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin to invite Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to an unprecedented, face-to-face meeting.

The last time two such high-ranking Jewish and Arab officials met was in 1919. There has been plenty of talk about since then, goodness knows, but to actually sit down at the same table and thrash out difficulties has been unthinkable. The battlefield has been the preferred "negotiating table" for the Middle East since the Palestinian partition.

Now Begin is reversing that trend, and we can but cheer his imagination and daring. We also cheer Sadat for accepting the offer, even though the invitation to Jerusalem did not include the other Arab leaders, who, with Sadat, form the opposition with which Israel must deal.

No one can safely predict what will come out of the meeting, but the confrontation cannot but contribute to eventual peace in the Middle East. Begin deserves full credit and support for his initiative. It is significant, too, for once the conservative faction recognizes talking is much to be preferred to fighting, the rest of the ideological spectrum quickly falls into line, and the move toward peace has the consensus it needs.

Oil altruists' network?

Nicholas Von Hoffman

WASHINGTON — Mobil oil is picking up the tab for the Public Broadcasting Service's presentation of Robert Graves' "I, Claudius." The series is so much finer than any of the dull dramatizations of trash fiction on commercial TV, you do yourself a disservice if you don't tune in . . . always providing, of course, the government didn't stick your community's non-commercial station with an unwatchable, permanently snow-shrouded UHF channel.

You need not feel too indebted to Mobil, however. There's politics in the altruism of their paying for this and so many other programs on the Petroleum Broadcasting System, as you increasingly hear PBS called. Oil company sponsorship of anything appealing to the upper-middle class is quite heavy. Note the Exxon commercials on "Face the Press" (sic) and "Meet the Nation" (sic). With "I, Claudius," the monster oil corporation has gone so far as to buy a double-page ad in the New York Times magazine section — upper-middle class again — with a pull-out program guide that includes, would you believe it, a reading list! Lordy, Lordy, the next thing you know they'll be cleaning your windshield again.

Deciding voice

No matter how good "I, Claudius" is, and it is very good indeed, it is disconcerting to learn that Herbert Schmetz, Mobil's vice president for public relations, appears to have been the person who ultimately decided whether or not the 12-part series would air in the United States. As is so often the case with adventuresome television, this package was done in England where it has been well-received.

We can't say for sure that if Joan Sullivan of Boston's WGBH-TV, who has handled the American presentation, had been turned down by Schmetz the series wouldn't have aired. We can no more say that we can say for sure the cuts — they prefer to call them edits — made for the American showing were made with Mobil in mind. ("I, Claudius" contains more than a minimum of sex and gore, but readers of Suetonius will tell you that next to the Emperor Caligula, Charlie Manson looks like the amiable, fat monk in the Xerox commercials.)

It can't be said that Mobil has abused its power in this instance, but should it have such power over non-commercial television? How non-commercial is non-commercial television anyhow? The lists of commercial sponsors before each program seems to grow larger every year.

It appears that what PBS has become is a very inexpensive way to do institutional advertising to a group with premium demographics: high income, high status, high educational types who've been bored by commercial TV too often to watch it any more. Advertising on non-commercial TV is very cheap. Not only is there no profit, but taxpayers and individual small donors pay 99 percent of the freight. Then a company like Mobil can move in for a couple of hundred grand and get the credit. The Mobil Oil Corporation should receive no greater recognition for its contribution than the Jones' family who send in their $25 or $30 a year.

To ask ourselves

We might ask ourselves what's the reason for non-commercial TV's existence? Is it only to get ads off the air? Even in this, non-commercial TV hasn't been altogether successful. Have you noticed the amount of promotional clutter on PBS stations? The gaps for commercials that don't exactly sell anything, but try to get you to make an offering above your taxes, so that Mobil can enjoy a yet cheaper advertising vehicle.

There are all kinds of goodies on non-commercial TV. Even a series like "Best of Families" which would have been better named "White Roots" is, in historical accuracy, superior to the Black "Roots" from which it derives. But if programs like "Visions" and "Nova" often have first-rate installments, PBS still emits the odor of commercialism and commercial control.

The arrival of Dick Cavett serves as this program year's best example. What is pleasant, vapid Mr. Cavett doing on the air with his chain of second-rank celebs who aren't quite right for Carson? His program failed in commercial television not because it was bold, or new or innovative or any of those words, but because it was dull.

The Carter administration has asked Congress for a large increase in non-commercial TV appropriations. Let this be done, but with the proviso that Mobil and the rest of the oil altruists clear out. Corporate America already runs three networks. That should suffice.

Dependency deductions

Sylvia Porter

(Third of seven columns)

Are you among the millions of Americans helping to support an elderly parent, say your mother? If so, right now, before '77 ends, is the time to protect whatever dependency and medical expense deductions you want to claim for this year. Just this past July's 5.9 per cent hike in Social Security benefits, for instance, while good news for your mother's pocketbook, could wipe out your deduction.

The basic facts: you are entitled to a $750 dependency deduction for your mother if (1) her gross income subject to tax is less than $750, and (2) you provide more than half her total support. You also can deduct the medical bills you pay for her if you provide more than half her support. Social Security benefits do not count toward the gross income test, but they can affect the support test.

As an illustration, say your mother received $3,000 in Social Security benefits in 1976 and had no other income. You paid all her medical and dental bills not covered by Medicare, a total of $2,950. To hit more than one-half support, you gave an extra $100.

You then took the $750 dependency deduction plus a $2,950 medical deduction — a total of $3,700 deductions for '76.

Now it's '77. Assume you contribute the same $2,950 for medical expenses plus $100 extra (just to keep it simple). But the July Social Security benefit boost lifts the total of what your mother spends on herself in '77 to over $3,088. Your $3,050 doesn't pass the more-than-half support test in '77.

You lose out on both deductions — a whopping $3,700 forfeited because you didn't spend a penny more.

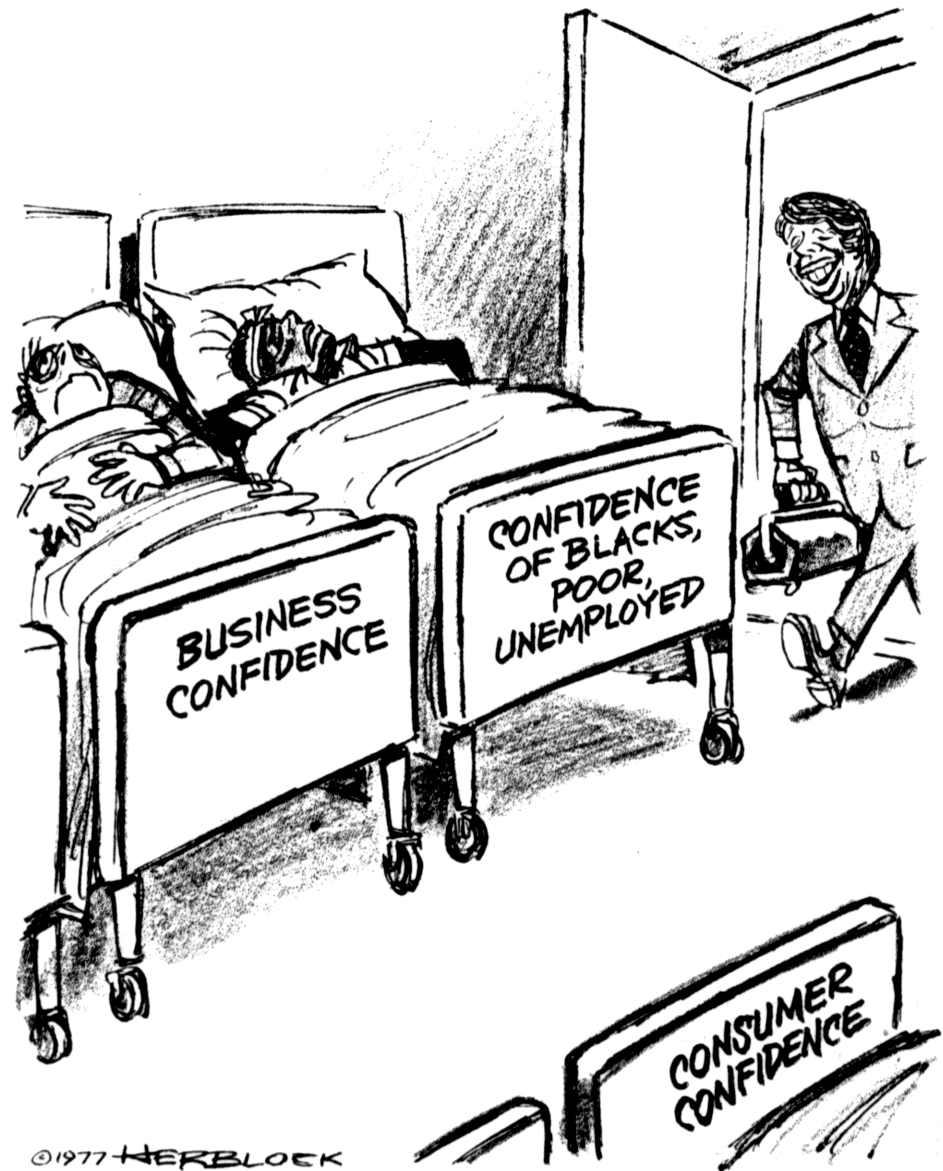

Right now, figure out the cost of your mother's total support in 1977.

Update all your figures and if need be, step up your contributions between now and Dec. 31 to protect your deductions!

Here's another often overlooked tax saving strategy. Say your mother has investments yielding more than $750 in taxable income for '77. You can't claim a dependency deduction because she doesn't pass the gross income test. But you don't necessarily lose the medical deduction as well. If you provide more than half her support, you can still take a deduction for medical bills you pay.

As an illustration for this, say your mother has received $1,200 in dividends and interest in Monday: Unexpected new family deductions.

'Good morning, patients — let's see some smiles here'

Rosenberg evidence found

WASHINGTON — We have discovered dramatic new evidence in the Julius and Ethel Rosenberg atomic spy case — evidence that an alert FBI agent found concealed in the fold of a wallet six years after the Rosenbergs were executed.

The discovery comes at a time that the executed couple's sons are battling to clear the Rosenberg name. It concerns Morton Sobell who was convicted in the Rosenberg spy case and was released from prison in 1969 for good behavior. He has never stopped insisting that he was innocent.

The new evidence — a flimsy strip of microfilm that an FBI agent found by slicing open a secret compartment in a Soviet spy's wallet — should be put in context. The Rosenberg spy story, the nation's most famous espionage case since Civil War days, broke after the Soviets exploded their first atomic bomb in 1949.

This ominous event unsettled the American people who had hoped the terrible atomic secret could be kept from the rest of the world. Swept up by the public mood, FBI agents and congressional investigators began searching for Communist spies with a vengeance.

The House UnAmerican Activities Committee began staging its act under the white-domed Capitol, a Big Top in marble and pillars. Huge crowds, subdued by the stately environment, would surge into the hearing room. Congressmen like J. Parnell Thomas and Richard Nixon, in the role of the accusers, would deliver dramatic, finger-pointing harangues on the subject of Communist spies and international intrigue.

The committee played the same scene over a dozen times. The script varied; the committee injected new names into each performance; but it was always the same old act.

It was in this atmosphere that the Rosenbergs were tried, convicted and finally executed on June 19, 1953. Morton Sobell drew a 30-year prison term in the same case.

Six years after the Sobell trial, the FBI ingeniously tracked down the master Soviet spy Rudolf Abel. His assistant, ex-KGB Lt. Col. Reino Hayhanen, testified against him. The KGB defector mentioned on the witness stand that he and Abel had been instructed by Moscow to deliver $10,000 to Sobell's wife, Helen, in 1955.

The two Soviet agents buried $5,000 in Bear Mountain Park, N.Y., in cellophane bags, and Abel deposited the other $5,000 in a bank, Hayhanen swore. The money was intended, he explained, to enlist Helen Sobell as a spy.

No direct evidence was produced that she knew anything about the money. In fact, Hayhanen ruefully admitted digging up the Bear Mountain money and pocketing the $5,000 himself. Mrs. Sobell's statement, therefore, that Hayhanen's testimony was a "meaningless . . . smear" has come to be widely accepted.

Here's where the new evidence fits in — evidence that the KGB at least planned to deliver $10,000 to Mrs. Sobell. It was uncovered by an FBI agent who was checking through Abel's belongings.

With his fingernail, he slit open a fold in Abel's wallet. Inside was the microfilm. It contained row after row of five-digit numbers, some 1,035 numbers in all. We have a copy of the intricate, encoded message, which was finally deciphered by the FBI with the help of other government experts.

It was addressed to "Comrade Vik," the secret name for Hayhanen. Among other instructions and queries, the secret message asked: "Would you be able to deliver money to wife of Stone?" According to sworn testimony and other FBI evidence, "Stone" was the Soviet code name for Sobell.

Commented Helen Sobell: "The 20-year-old fantasy story of a Russian spy is dragged out of mothballs and dressed up with microdots. Anyone can concoct stories or microdots about innocent people as they did in the 1950s. But it was a lie then, and it is a lie now."

Her attorney, Marshall Perlin, called for the release of all documents in the case "instead of selective leaks."

Who's News — Jimmy Carter's "personal touch" is beginning to win friends and influence votes on Capitol Hill. But his congressional liaison staff is regarded as amateurish. Sometimes the staff allows congressional mail to go unanswered for weeks. But the president usually returns calls personally the same day.

— Sen. Ed Zorinsky, D-Neb., takes pride in being known in Washington as the "hick of Capitol Hill." His hometown newspaper, the Omaha World Herald, headlines his comments about fellow legislators. He refers to the Senate as a club populated by slothful senators. A recent editorial cartoon showed the Nebraskan about to goose some snoozing senators with a cattle prod. But when Vice President Walter Mondale presented him with a gavel recently for presiding over the Senate for more than 100 hours, Zorinsky declared how proud he was to preside over "the greatest deliberative body in the world."

State's lawmakers urged to pass antitrust measure

HARRISBURG (UPI) — The head of the U.S. Justice Department's antitrust division Thursday urged the Pennsylvania legislature to enact a bill giving the state attorney general new sweeping antitrust probe powers.

"I would like to urge swift enactment of a Pennsylvania antitrust act," said Assistant Attorney General John H. Shenefield, named to his post by President Carter in August.

"The resources of the U.S. available to combat antitrust violations are limited," Shenefield told a state House Consumer Affairs Committee hearing, "and our efforts alone cannot do the job."

He endorsed the "strong tool" the bill would give the Pennsylvania attorney general, and I would also specifically endorse the stiff penalties, particularly the criminal sanctions this legislation would impose on antitrust violators."

The bill endorsed by Shenefield still lists as its chief sponsor former House Speaker

Herbert Fineman, D-Philadelphia, since convicted on a federal charge of obstructing justice.

Harry Boyer, president of the state AFL-CIO, joined Shenefield in urging passage of the bill to permit investigation of "unscrupulous businesses that conduct a daily assault on the free market system and cost our consumers up to $5 billion a year."

Attorney James Hagar, representing the Pennsylvania Chamber of Commerce, said vigorous enforcement of federal antitrust law has tripled in 10 years and makes state legislation unnecessary.

He charged that one bill provision setting antitrust damages aside to fund more state antitrust suits puts state attorneys general "in a position not unlike a bounty hunter."

Hagar also called the powers given to attorneys general under the Fineman-Schmitt bill too broad.

One key provision permits an attorney general to begin an antitrust investigation "whenever it appears to (him), either upon complaint or otherwise, that any person has engaged in or is about to engage in (monopoly or restraint of trade) ... or whenever he believes it to be in the public interest that an investigation be made."

To gain subpoena power for his antitrust investigations, a state attorney general would need to seek Commonwealth Court authority. The bill gives that state court a 10-day time limit on issuing or denying the subpoena power.

Hospital patient abducted

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (UPI) — Salisbury Township police Thursday were seeking at least six people who roughed up two nurses and abducted a woman from the intensive care unit of Allentown and Sacred Heart Hospital.

Police said witnesses differ on the number of people involved in the abduction of Katherine B. Sharp, 37, alleged high priestess of a cult combining Indian mysticism with drug use that had its headquarters in a house located in a wooded area of Milford Township, Bucks County.

Between six and 10 people, including at least two women, entered the hospital Tuesday evening, gave a karate chop to the throat of Nurse Maria Loehr and roughed up Nurse Sharon Broschius, police revealed Thursday.

About half of the group held nurses at bay in the second floor wing, preventing them from telephoning for help. The other half went to the intensive care unit, disconnected tubes and took Mrs. Sharp to a car.

Mrs. Sharp had entered the hospital Saturday, on transfer from Quakertown Community Hospital.

Truckers' association hit with rate fixing civil suit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Justice Department says a truckers' association has conspired since the "early 1940s" to illegally fix interstate shipping rates in Pennsylvania, West Virginia, New Jersey and 24 other states.

The department, in a civil suit, has asked the U.S. District Court in Washington to void existing interstate rates adopted by the Motor Carriers Tariff Bureau Inc. of Cleveland and permanently enjoin any future illegal rate-fixing.

Assistant Attorney General John H. Shenefield, in charge of the antitrust division, said the bureau, also called MCTB, has proposed and adopted rates for member firms without approval by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Rate-setting "conferences" conducted by a motor carriers' association are exempted from provisions of antitrust laws only when the activity has ICC approval, Shenefield said.

The suit charged the MCTB set rates at non-competitively high levels without ICC approval and deprived shippers and the public of the benefits of free and open competition in violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act.

"Beginning some time in the early 1940s ... and continuing to the date of this complaint the defendant and co-conspirators have engaged in a combination and conspiracy in unreasonable restraint of ... trade," the suit charged.

A Justice Department spokesman said about 130 member trucking firms are involved.

"In 1975, motor carriers which participated in rates published by MCTB for interstate for-hire transportation of property derived aggregate revenues therefrom in excess of $75 million," the suit said.

"On five separate occasions," it said, "MCTB has unsuccessfully sought to obtain ICC approval to operate as a ratemaking conference. Notwithstanding these unsuccessful attempts to obtain antitrust immunity ... the MCTB has continued to operate as a rate-making conference."

The Justice Department said the bulk of shipping by the association's member firms involves northeastern and central states.

Cianfrani $35,000 richer from bellydancing bash

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Political friends of indicted state Sen. Henry Cianfrani have made him about $35,000 richer with a bellydancing bash in a center city restaurant.

Cianfrani was the benefactor of a $100-a-plate dinner at the Middle East Restaurant, given by restaurant owner and city councilman James Tayoun and co-sponsored by Bernard Avellino, a lawyer and Democratic ward leader in southwest Philadelphia.

Earlier in the day Cianfrani had been released from St.

Luke Hospital after six days of recuperation from exhaustion. "I've never felt better," he said.

Cianfrani faces a 110-count indictment in federal court in January. The ostensible purpose of the dinner of middle eastern delicacies, spiced with rapid gyrations of dark-haired ladies, was to raise funds for his defense.

Cianfrani said he didn't need the money, but said, "The government's got so much money against me, it's always good to have a little help from my friends."

Ex-Guard boss case not being shelved yet

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Attorney General Robert Kane has promised to give top priority in looking into additional evidence that could lead to further prosecution of former state Adj. Gen. Harry Mier.

The Military Affairs and Aeronautics committee uncovered evidence the Justice Department may not have in the case of Mier, who pleaded guilty in July to using state aircraft for personal matters, according to committee counsel.

"We will give you our utmost cooperation," Kane told the committee Thursday. "I will give it top priority."

"With respect to the Penn-sylvia Department of Justice investigation, which I consider concluded, there is nothing of a legal nature that can be initiated. But if you have something we have not seen I'd be happy to look at it."

Jeffrey Ernico, the committee's Democratic counsel, said some members of the committee felt Mier was not duly punished for his alleged misuse of state services.

Mier, whose post made him head of the Pennsylvania National Guard, pleaded guilty July 7 to one count of embezzling aircraft fuel for a personal flight.

Legislators Analysis court Somalia

MOGADISHU, Somalia (UPI) — A U.S. congressional delegation conferred Thursday with President Siad Barre on Somalia's military needs only hours after the departure of the first expelled Soviet and Cuban advisers.

Although the congressional visit had been planned for a month, the trip took on added significance in light of Somalia's announcement Sunday that it was ordering out several thousand Soviet military and civilian advisers and closing Soviet bases. The first group of Russians left Wednesday.

Even as the congressmen arrived at the airport to leave after seven hours of talks with Barre, several busloads of Soviet advisers and technicians were waiting for a flight from Moscow to take them home.

Somalia also broke diplomatic relations with Cuba and expelled the 44 Cuban advisers in the country. They left Tuesday.

The eight-member group from the House Armed Services Committee met with Barre for 90 minutes of "frank" discussions about the military balance in the region, the Indian Ocean and the Middle East.

Rep. Melvin Price, D-Ill., who chairs the committee, said Barre showed "openness" in the talks. He said the Somali leader did not give them any message for President Carter.

Price called the visit a "fact finding" mission and said his group does not speak for the U.S. government.

Following Sunday's announcement, there was speculation that the United States had been asked to assist the Somalis, at least in some indirect fashion.

Most speculation centered on the possibility of a third country giving Mogadishu assistance with the consent of the U.S. government.

Sadat moves strain Arab solidarity

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The rapid-fire developments in the Middle East have thrown the normally placid diplomatic processes of the United Nations into almost frantic disarray — and Arab solidarity appeared to be straining at the seams.

Egyptian U.N. Ambassador Ahmed Esmat Abdel Meguid was himself caught "completely by surprise" by the decision of his president, Anwar Sadat, to go to Jerusalem to talk with the Israelis.

Sadat was clearly betting heavily on his reputation and the power of his country as the most populous Arab nation to hold the Arab world together in one of the most dramatic moves in decades of Middle East squabbling.

To back his move, Sadat was reported to have the backing of Saudi Arabia, the Arab world's wealthiest nation.

But other Middle East diplomats at the United Nations were less sanguine about his chances of pulling it off — or of even surviving.

"I can see two possible developments," Libyan Ambassador Mansur Rashid Kikhia. "We could give in to Israel from now on, which we do not want. Or there could be major upheavals in the Arab world."

Within hours, Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmi had resigned in protest, and cracks began showing in Arab solidarity.

"The Fahmi resignation speaks for itself," said Zedhi Labib Terzi, the Palestine Liberation Organization's representative at the United Nations.

"It's the best comment yet on Sadat's decision," said Terzi.

"A courageous move," said Kikhia.

A delegate from a small,

Arab oil-producing state in the Middle East said of Sadat's visit: "We don't like it but we have to live with it."

An Iranian delegate said Sadat was "taking the biggest gamble of his career, and the risk is he may not be able to pull it off."

"The big question is where the (Egyptian) army stands," the Iranian added.

Freedom House backs Panama Canal treaties

NEW YORK (UPI) — Freedom House Thursday called on the U.S. Senate to ratify the Panama Canal treaties although it described Panama's record on human rights as deplorable.

The organization, in a 1,000-word advisory and analyses of the treaties, said that if they were not ratified "the immediate winners will be the communist parties of Latin America and Caribbean, and the Marxist regimes throughout the Third World."

John Richardson, Jr., president of Freedom House, said the advisory had been approved by an overwhelming majority of the board of trustees and came after the board had heard from "some of the principal supporters and an opponent of the treaties."

The advisory said it supported ratification despite the organization's frequent "reporting of the deplorable record on human rights of the present regime in Panama."

Handling the trauma of mastectomy

My right breast was removed for a cancer that was detected early. It is now two years since the surgery was performed. At the age of 41 this came as a shattering blow to me. My husband has been most supportive, yet I find a recurring desire to have plastic surgery to enlarge this breast area. I find it difficult to discuss this with my husband, or even with my own doctors, for I'm sure that they would not approve. I teach school. None of my pupils are aware of any defect. —

Mrs. E. B., III.

Dear Mrs. B.: Mastectomy, or the removal of a breast by surgery, for cancer, carries with it many psychological implications. Some women, after successful surgery, may be thrown into a period of depression because of this threat to their femininity.

Yet it is remarkable how often many women, supported by their husbands, their families and by their own inner emotional strength, develop an excellent image of themselves after such surgery. The joy of a recovery from a cancer is very often sufficient compensation for the cosmetic deformity.

In some instances, women do not completely reconcile themselves to the traumatic aspect of mastectomy. They, like you, seek some surgical method of implant to enlarge the site of the operation.

Some plastic surgeons are concentrating on a variety of operations to improve the cosmetic appearance of the chest following removal of the breast. But in general, highly critical surgeons do not show enthusiasm for the aesthetic reconstruction of the chest wall in these cases.

Those who have been performing the surgery are extremely selective of the cases they choose to do.

My personal feeling is that there is so much gratification in the normal return to health that it seems foolish to take any unnecessary risk at this time.

If the psychological pressure of your recurring desire continues you should openly discuss this with your doctors, with your husband and, if necessary, with a psychologist, in the hope that you can attain greater tranquility.

Physicians and surgeons everywhere are impressed by the remarkable courage and rebound to health and normal activity that so many women are able to enjoy after such life-saving surgery.

I'm 20 and recently had a biopsy of the breast. It was not a cancer. But I was told that I will probably get a breast cancer in the next 10 years. I was told it was not cystic mastitis, but it had a very long name that I can't recall. Can you tell me the correct name? The doctor said that it was pre-cancerous tissue and looks like cancer, but is not. I know that I'm supposed to keep a close watch-out for more tumors. Is there anything I can do to prevent its coming?

Mrs. P.T., Tex.

Dear Mrs. T.: I am dumbfounded by your letter. It is beyond my wildest belief that any doctor would tell a patient that she "will probably get breast cancer within the next 10 years."

Doctors cannot make prophesies or speculate about time. If this statement was actually made it did you a great injustice by introducing the destructive factor of fear into your life. It may very well be that in the state of anxiety following your breast biopsy you did not really hear or understand the doctor's message.

Your inability to recall the exact name may be further evidence of your concern at that time.

Certainly, another visit with the surgeon, accompanied by your husband or other family member, would clarify your confusion and allay your anxiety. I urge you to do this, rather than to allow many years of unhappiness and anxiety to dominate your lives.

Insist that the doctor, not you, keep a close "watch-out" for more tumors.

When you get the correct name, be sure that you understand its meaning, for unexplained names of diseases can years worrying about a condition that will probably never in themselves be terrifying. Don't spend the next 10 arise!

Buying lumber needn't wittle away novice's enthusiasm

By DEBORAH ENYEART
Family Fare Editor

STROUDSBURG — Magazines and newspapers contain lots of craft ideas and suggestions for building simple shelves and cabinets to solve home storage problems.

The directions usually sound simple enough and the article boasts that the whole thing can be made for $20.

The project sounds like a snap to the weekend carpenter — that is, until he walks in the door of a lumber or hardware store.

The novice craftsman may feel intimidated by shelf after shelf of every kind of nail, hinge, bolt and saw imaginable.

"I just wanted a few nails," he thinks as he stares at packages of common, box, casing and finishing nails, sized in something called "pennies."

His first inclination may be to forget the whole thing and leave before other shoppers stare at him as if he doesn't know what he's doing.

Instead, by gathering his courage and asking a salesman, he can probably get just what he needs and find that hardware stores aren't as complicated as they look.

One of the best things a home craftsman can do is to take an illustration of his project with him when he goes to buy the supplies.

If the instructions don't list all the materials that are needed, the salesman probably can tell what the project will require.

Russell Cramer of Cramer's Cashway said that the salesman could probably work out the specifications by looking at an illustration.

Letting the salesman know what the project is can also help the person get the right grade of wood, Cramer said.

He explained that someone may ask for some wood that's advertised at a special price but that the material may not be suitable for what he needs.

It may have too many knots to be used in a bookcase, he said as an example.

Wood is graded by the manufacturer who stamps each piece with its grade.

The grade for softwoods is determined by the defects the piece has. A select piece wouldn't have knots and would be more expensive. It would be used when an unblemished appearance is needed.

The common grades are less expensive and have defects in their appearance. Pieces with few knots can be used when you want a knotted appearance. Pieces with larger or more knots could be used when appearance isn't important, such as the back of a cabinet.

The concern that craftsmen have with knots, which is where a limb grew out of the trunk, is that they won't fall at a point of support.

Plywood is made by pressing and gluing layers of soft or hard woods together in a kind of wood sandwich. Plywood made from soft woods is usually used for general carpentry projects.

Each side of a sheet of plywood is graded for its appearance and strength. It can be sanded or unsanded and made with interior or exterior glues.

Cramer explained that the glue used in making exterior plywood is designed so that moisture won't cause the layers to separate.

Although exterior plywood costs a little more than the interior type, craftsmen may prefer to use it so that the project they've worked so hard on won't be damaged by humidity in the house.

"Most people prefer the exterior glue. You can never go wrong because it won't ever delaminate," Cramer said.

Another material which can be used in home carpentry projects is particle board, which is made by pressing wood chips into a sheet.

It has a uniform appearance with no grain and costs less. But, Cramer cautions, because it lacks grain, it doesn't have longitudinal strength, which would make it unsuitable for something like an eight foot shelf.

After deciding what kind of material is needed, the home craftsman will need to determine how much he needs. Most instructions list the amount of each size that is required.

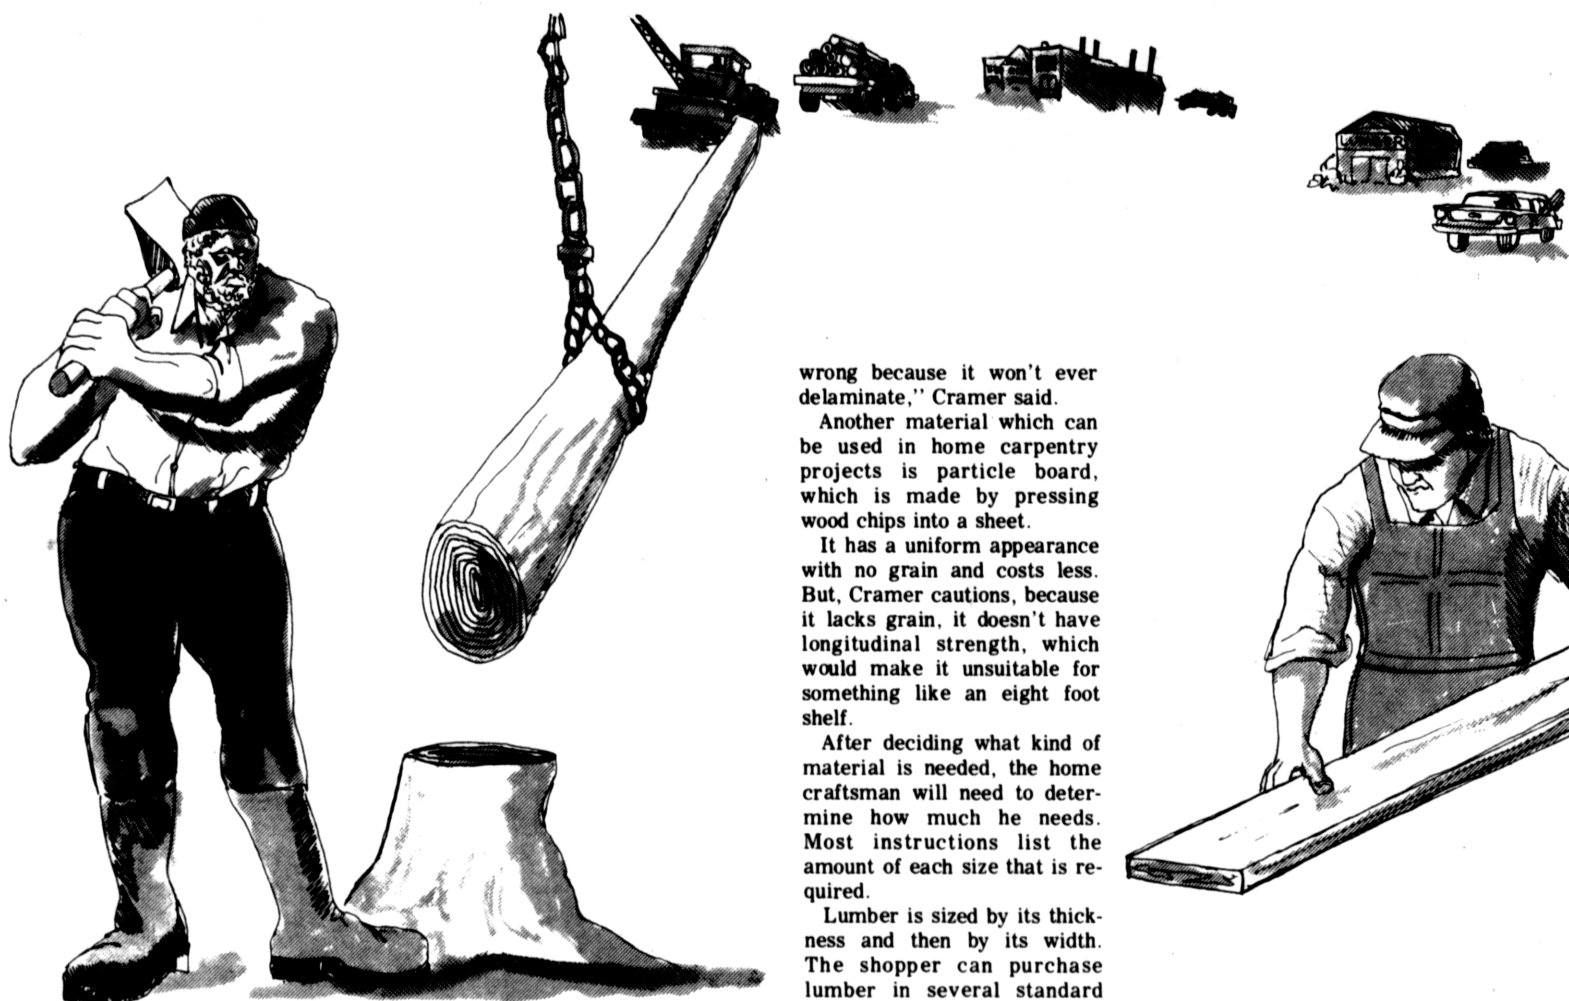

Lumber is sized by its thickness and then by its width. The shopper can purchase lumber in several standard lengths in the thickness and width he needs.

Boards are defined as an inch thick. A board that's 1 x 4 is an inch thick and four inches wide. Sizes for boards are 1x2, 1x4, 1x6, 1x8, 1x10 and 1x12.

Dimensional lumber is two inches thick and is often used for framing.

Lumber is usually sold in even lengths, such as 1x4, six feet long.

The thing to remember, Cramer cautions, is that these are the sizes before the wood has been dried and that the pieces sold at a store are actually smaller.

the board and the type of lumber, Cramer said.

Common and box nails have heads and resemble each other except that the box nail is thinner. Casing or finishing nails are used when the craftsman doesn't want the head to show. They can be driven below the wood surface with a nailset and the small hole can be covered.

Having the right tool for the job can make the work a lot easier, Cramer said.

Someone who doesn't want to invest in a lot of tools can probably rent what he needs.

Some basic tools which he may want to get are a punch, drill, hammer, utility knife, carpenter's level, nailset, measuring tape, screwdrivers and combination square.

He will probably need more than one saw for his work. Saws are sized by the number of points or teeth they have.

An eight-point saw would be used to cut boards while an 11-point saw would be used for finishing work when a smoother cut is needed, Cramer explained.

Just as lumber companies are marketing wood sized for the novice builder, some tool companies are making hand tools designed for the do-it-yourselfer rather than a professional carpenter.

The makers of Stanley tools, for example, have marketed Surform tools which can be used to shave, shape, plane, file and smooth. A plane, Cramer said, is an expensive professional's tool that has limited uses for the craftsman.

Some basic power tools which a homeowner may want for repair or remodeling jobs are a variable speed drill, sander and variable speed jig-saw.

Just Between Us —

With Bobby Westbrook

I never have to travel very far to find myself in a totally different world. There was a time when serving as a surrogate mother and baby-sitter involved mainly meals, naps and kissing bumps and bruises to make them well.

My latest four-day stint while Nancy was in Atlanta representing her college at an alumni conference involved mostly chauffeuring to chorus or football or piano lessons or Brownies, looking up a recipe for English trifle to be made and taken to school as part of the unit on Dickens, helping to get a football jersey over the shoulder pads, and mainly as games master.

I might still be able to beat the youngest in checkers but I failed miserably in setting any kind of record in the Guinness Book of Records game even in tidily-winks in answering the questions like: Which is heavier: the largest newborn baby or the smallest grown man.

The Scandinavian night at the college was also a different world with one of the largest attendances since Greek night. There are, apparently, a lot of local residents with Norwegian backgrounds in this area.

We were fortunate to have at our table the Hansens who recently moved to the Sciota area from Norway by way of Brooklyn and Hackettstown, N.J., and were attending their first international night at the college. They like this area very much and in fact the Pocono scenery reminds them of Norway, which is a compliment indeed.

There are several other worlds-within-world I plan to explore this week, including an art exhibit and a planning meeting, but not in time for my deadline. But just thinking about them makes me realize that what I'm going to have to do is spend some time getting my own world in order before the annual Thanksgiving invasion.

So far, the only thing I've accomplished is getting the reserved seat tickets for the football game. Meanwhile, I've somehow got to clear a path among all the half-completed Christmas gift projects which are littering the landscape.

Have you ever noticed that the calendar and all the clocks in the house which normally proceed in an orderly manner somehow manage to march in double time between Thanksgiving and Christmas? The days of the week flip by like dead leaves in a windstorm and the clock hands jump hours at a time.

And just when we need all the time we can salvage!

Adjust recipes to yield feast for family

By Candy Coleman and Millie Larsen

Pilgrim-like we grace our table each Thanksgiving season with a tender delicate fowl. Traditionally, a roasted turkey is served and everyone has their favorite method of preparation. Candy and I want to suggest some variations for accompanying entrees on this important festive day!

The following dinner consists of dishes much the same as the first Thanksgiving meals. Early settlers' feast included wild turkey and game, cooked squash, pumpkin, corn, fresh cranberries and beans.

Today there is an important difference in the preparation of the meal. Modern cooking equipment and time-saving appliances (primarily food processors and microwave ovens) have replaced heavy iron pots and kettles used in the fireplace.

Your Horn of Plenty? Fresh Cranberry Relish that is made with all natural foods — made the night before, the flavor is enhanced.

To complete a bountiful dinner serve a Broccoli Casserole, Baked Squash with Dates and Apple-Sausage Stuffing. The stuffing can be baked in the turkey, or if you're too lazy to stuff the turkey, spoon it into a well-greased 2-quart casserole and bake in oven with turkey the last hour of the cooking time.

Paradise Pumpkin Pie straight from Paradise Valley. This is one of my favorite recipes. Try this and hope for leftovers since pumpkin pie tastes better the second time around.

Accompany your turkey with this contemporary Thanksgiving menu:
Do all the chopping in your food processor and save hours!!

Apple-Sausage Stuffing
1 lb. sausage
1 C. diced bacon
1 large onion, chopped
1 C. chopped celery
½ lb. mushrooms, sliced
2 apples, cored and diced
1 C. chopped parsley
1 tsp. each sage and thyme
1 loaf firm-type white bread, cut into 1-inch cubes
2 C. chicken broth
Salt and pepper to taste

In a large skillet, fry sausage and bacon until crisp and brown. Remove sausages and cut into 1-inch pieces. Replace in skillet and add onion, celery, mushrooms, apples, parsley and herbs.

Saute, stirring occasionally for five minutes. Stir in bread cubes and chicken broth. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Pour mixture into a bowl, cover and cool. (Can be done the night before).

Stuff turkey, which has been sprinkled inside and out with salt and pepper, with this mixture just before placing it in the oven. Stuff body and neck cavities. Sew or skewer openings. Roast in preheated oven at 350 degrees for 20 minutes per pound.

Fresh Cranberry Relish
4 C. (1 lb.) fresh cranberries
2 medium-sized red apples, unpeeled and cored
1 large or 2 medium-sized oranges, quartered, pitted
2/3 C. honey
Wash cranberries; drain, and remove stems. Alternately put cranberries, apples and orange quarters through coarse blade of food chopper, or food processor.

Blend in honey; combine thoroughly. Refrigerate, covered, several hours or overnight before serving.

Baked Squash with Dates
(Good all year round)

6 C. cooked and mashed butternut squash or pumpkin
½ tsp. salt
½ C. honey (or sugar to taste)
¼ tsp. mace
¼ tsp. cinnamon
10 or 12 dates cut in small pieces
½ C. chopped pecans or cashews
2 T. butter
Orange juice

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Mix the above ingredients (use orange juice only if it appears dry) and pour into a buttered casserole. Cover and bake 30 minutes, adding orange juice if needed. Serves 6 to 8.

Broccoli Crumb Casserole
1½ lb. fresh broccoli, cut up (6 cups)
1 can condensed cream of mushroom soup
¼ C. mayonnaise or salad dressing
¼ C. (1 ounce) shredded sharp process American cheese
1 T. chopped pimiento
½ tsp. lemon juice
1/3 C. rich round cheese cracker crumbs (6 crackers)

In covered saucepan, cook broccoli in small amount of boiling salted water for 10 to 15 minutes; drain. Turn into 1½-quart casserole.

Combine soup, mayonnaise, cheese, pimiento, and lemon juice. Pour over broccoli. Top with cracker crumbs.

Bake in 350 degrees oven for 35 minutes. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

This can be prepared ahead of time and refrigerated until time to bake.

Paradise Pumpkin Pie
8-oz. pkg. cream cheese
¼ C. sugar
½ tsp. vanilla
1 egg
9-inch unbaked pastry shell

1¼ C. canned or cooked pumpkin
½ C. sugar
1 tsp. cinnamon
¼ tsp. ginger
¼ tsp. nutmeg
Dash of salt
1 C. evaporated milk
2 eggs, slightly beaten

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Combine softened cream cheese, sugar and vanilla, mixing until well blended. Add egg; mix well.

Spread onto bottom of pastry shell. Combine remaining ingredients; mix well. Carefully pour over cream cheese mixture. Bake at 350 degrees one hour and five minutes or until done.

Cool. Brush with maple syrup and garnish with nuts, if desired.

Thanksgiving dinner can be a traditional feast even with small gatherings. Holidays are not always large family gatherings and often there are only two or three people gathered for dinner on this special day.

A lovely substitute for the usual large turkey could be rock cornish hens (one for each person), or one half of a small turkey, or just the breast of turkey, which are all available in our markets today.

These recipes can be divided in half and will serve three to four people sufficiently.

If your family has decreased in size, try establishing a Thanksgiving tradition and invite an away-from-home friend for dinner or someone who lives too far from relatives to come for the day. Make Thanksgiving Day something special for all!

FAITH Shows Us How Much We Can Be Thankful For!

Thanksgiving Day is an event celebrated by more than one nation, and aside from being a traditional family feast day, it is intended for those of us who are more inclined to dwell on our misfortunes than on our advantages, because we are naturally more conscious of them. For example, sickness is more likely to command our attention than a state of good health. Regardless of our circumstances, we must remind ourselves of all the good things that have happened to us, and also, of all the misfortunes that we have been spared; and we should do this every day of our lives, rather than wait for a special occasion such as this. By attending the Church of your choice you will learn to recognize and be grateful for your many blessings, and thereby be better able to cope with your problems, whatever they may be.

O Lord! that lends me life,
Lend me a heart replete with thankfulness!

ARIES (March 21 to April 20) — You're in the spotlight now, with special emphasis on response to your efforts and presentation of ideas. Curb any tendency toward aggressiveness; win your way through tact, diplomacy.
TAURUS (April 21 to May 21) — Stress your innate enthusiasm and eagerness to do well but be willing, also, to WAIT out results, to accept temporary setbacks with inner calm.
GEMINI (May 22 to June 21) — Your know-how and ability to handle the unexpected could result in outstanding advantages. Spend time and talents constructively. This day will be rich in opportunity.
CANCER (June 22 to July 23) — A fair day. You can manage in better-than-average fashion, yet must take precautions neither to underestimate nor overevaluate new propositions.
LEO (July 24 to August 23) — Don't be impulsive about making changes unless you are certain they will prove beneficial. Business pursuits highly favored.
VIRGO (August 24 to September 23) — A day for action? Don't slow up progress by being overly meticulous, fussy, looking for nonexistent defects in your program.
LIBRA (September 24 to October 23) — While you await new developments or results of efforts, proceed with other good plans, ideas. Don't sit back, satisfied with previous endeavors — or gains.
SCORPIO (October 24 to November 22) — A day in which to curb your natural Martian aggressiveness with intelligent self-discipline, moderation. Avoid extremes.
SAGITTARIUS (November 23 to December 21) — Neither fear to step into a new or changed picture, nor step too quickly before you are ready. Know your ground sufficiently and that of associates, too.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20) — Speak in discreet words, with temperance and compassion foremost — it will work wonders now. Opposition? It can be a healthy challenge: self-control!
AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19) — Give careful thought to decisions you must make soon. Try to understand thoroughly the jobs and involvements of the next few days. And be objective!
PISCES (February 20 to March 20) — Influences highly stimulating. Overzealousness, overreaching may tempt. Hasty words and deeds could cause endless redoing and undoing; leave scars, too. YOU BORN TODAY have a vibrant, warm personality but are inclined to be extremely temperamental—especially if you feel that your "rights" are being infringed upon. With a strong gift of leadership, you chafe under orders and will probably not remain in a subordinate position for very long. Many fields are open to you in choosing a career, but notably the law, medicine or writing — especially as a dramatist or critic; also the business world, where you could capitalize on your fine organizing abilities.

Bidding quiz

Your right-hand opponent bids Three Hearts, neither side vulnerable. What would you bid now with each of the following five hands?

1. ♠AJ7 ♥10 ♦KQJ984 ♣AK6
2. ♠A9 ♥KQ74 ♦KJ ♣AK987
3. ♠8 ♥J63 ♦AJ4 ♣AQ8542
4. ♠AKJ10762 ♥3 ♦AJ6 ♣K7
5. ♠AK854 ♥— ♦AQJ3 ♣KQ95

1. Double. Your hand is a little too good for an overall of four diamonds. True, partner would read four diamonds as indicating a strong hand, but he wouldn't expect quite this much. Change the king of clubs to the deuce and you'd have about an average four diamond bid.

2. The double is primarily for takeout. It indicates considerable all-around strength and asks partner to respond accordingly. Partner will occasionally pass, changing your takeout double to a business double when he thinks it's better to play for penalties.

3. Three notrump. This means what it says — that you want to play the hand in notrump. You're not asking partner to name a suit, and he should do so only when he has good reason to think that a suit contract would be better. It is dangerous to double, because there's almost no chance partner will pass, and his suit response might get you past three notrump.

4. Pass. There's little to be gained and much to be lost by competing at this point. To overall with four clubs would be courting disaster, since your left-hand opponent might have the balance of strength and good clubs. If partner can't compete after you pass, there's probably not much of a future for your side.

5. Four spades. Decisive action should be taken here. Partner needs very little for you to make a game in spades. Of course, the next player may be able to double you successfully, but this risk is more than offset by the possibility of missing a spade game if you overcalled with only three spades.

When you are confronted with a preemptive bid, it often happens that whatever you do carries some element of risk. The governing principle is to react to these situations in a reasonable manner, don't be either too pessimistic or too optimistic.

5. Four hearts. This is a typical illustration of a sound cuebid in the opponent's suit. You should assume, as a rational person, that game is likely in any suit your partner responds with. Furthermore, a slam is not out of the question.

Of course, since partner is forced to respond to the cuebid and may have a very poor hand, you should be cautious thereafter, passing any minimum response. The important thing is to tell partner right away that you have a huge hand with first-round control of hearts.

Black market adoptions may be on rise

By CRAIG A. PALMER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A still-unreleased government study says the shady world of selling babies gets great public exposure but little official attention, and black market adoptions may be increasing.

Desperate couples use desperate stratagems and pay exorbitant fees for children in what was called the seller's market created by a shortage of healthy white babies available for adoption.

"The problem of adoptions for profit has received intermittent attention for some 25 years, but there is little indication of progress toward its resolution and, in fact, some evidence of its increase," the study said.

Interviewing was conducted in the Philadelphia, Los Angeles, Miami, New York City and Des Moines, Iowa, areas.

The Child Welfare League of America study reported finding such practices as finalizing adoption of an American child in a foreign country, or the biological mother admitting herself to the hospital for delivery of the baby in the adoptive mother's name.

Some persons interviewed for the study voiced suspicions that organized baby selling rings are operating, but no evidence was offered.

A draft of the study, Adoptions Without Agencies: A Study of Independent Adoptions, was prepared for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare with subsidies totaling $292,000. The final report is expected by January. The draft was made available to UPI.

"In spite of the attention paid by the media to occasional investigations of the 'black market' area of independent adoptions, this type of crime, and other abuses of the adoption law, are apparently not given a high priority within the offices having the authority to prosecute violators," the study said.

The problem appears to be of little concern to state lawmakers or law enforcement officials, it added, saying:

"Whatever the reason for this lack of concern, it cannot be for lack of evidence that adoptions for profit occur."

At Senate "baby selling" hearings in April 1975, the Child Welfare League estimated that among 16,500 non-agency adoptions arranged by middlemen in 1971, as many as 4,000 to 5,000 of them might be "black market" adoptions.

However, many independent adoptions arranged outside licensed social welfare agencies are neither illegal nor improper although some may present other risks for parties involved in the adoption, the study said.

"The potential risks in independent adoptions are heightened when the adoption is arranged, not by an ethical professional operating strictly within the law and motivated by ... the best interests of all parties, but by persons whose primary goal is monetary gain," the report said.

Interviews turned up "fairly typical" reports of fees for babies like $4,000, $8,000 and $15,000 to $20,000 mentioned in New Mexico, Illinois and New Jersey. Fees as high as $40,000 were noted.

Hager polling again

By SCOTT MACLEOD

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Senate Minority Leader Henry Hager has used public funds for another opinion poll that asks Pennsylvanians whether they like Hager and other hopefuls in the 1978 gubernatorial race.

William Cromer, $25,000-a-year head of the new Senate GOP research office which conducted the poll, denied Hager personally benefited from the poll. He said such implications unfairly cast "a shadow of doubt on my work."

Cromer said the polls were strictly designed to register attitudes on issues like abortion and gun control so Senate Republicans could develop an innovative legislative program based directly on the public's wishes.

He said in order to fully understand public attitudes on issues, he had to ask respondents about certain politicians like Hager because voters associate issues with political personalities.

"I don't want this to be viewed as political research. It is not. It is governmental research," he said.

Cromer said he did not believe Hager could use the results in plotting a course to the governor's mansion.

"I would say it doesn't help him in the gubernatorial race because his identification is low, and when it's of that structure, the logical choice is 'Why am I running?'"

"The family is what determines whether you are going to run, not survey results," said Cromer.

UPI disclosed last month that Hager had conducted five polls that included questions about prominent politicians including Hager who might run for governor. A sixth poll in progress at that time was made available Monday.

Cromer said Hager had been given previous polls — they showed he had a low voter recognition rating — but he was not given the results of the latest survey.

Hager, fearing the appearance of impropriety, said he has reimbursed the research office with $525.

A declared GOP candidate, House Minority Leader Robert Butera, has paid a Detroit research agency $26,000 from his campaign chest to survey 800 households in Pennsylvania.

Among the questions in the latest Hager poll, respondents were asked whether they liked 15 assorted political figures, including the six who are considered the top contenders in the governor's race.

Besides Hager they were: Arlen Specter, former Philadelphia district attorney; Richard Thornburgh, former U.S. Justice Department prosecutor; House Minority Leader Robert Butera; Lt. Gov. Ernest Kline; and Robert P. Casey, former auditor general.

The pollees were also asked: — To identify the candidate they voted for in the 1976 Republican primary for the U.S. Senate nomination.

— Whether they would be inclined to vote for a candidate endorsed by a newspaper, the chamber of commerce, Gov. Milton Shapp, Sen. John Heinz or labor unions.

— Whether they liked candidates who were "knowledgeable," "tough on corruption," "tough but fair," "a member of the legislature," "different."

Cromer said the "name-identification" questions about Hager and other political figures may be discontinued because of adverse publicity.

Report from the front lines of the Ogaden war zone

By CHARLES P. WALLACE
MOUNT BORFIQ, Ethiopia (UPI) — As the sun burns away the heavy morning mist that enshrouds Mount Borfiq, a Somali insurgent in pale green fatigues waves in toward the distant thud of heavy artillery.

"We must go down soon," he says. "The Ethiopians can see us now. You never know."

The rhythmic rumble of heavy guns — "that's incoming, definitely incoming," notes one war-hardened observer — delineates the front of this perplexing war between Somali nationalists and Ethiopian forces.

The sun winks menacingly along the copper tips of machine gun ammunition which is spilled on the ground like an overturned deck of cards.

A Somali gingerly picks his way to the summit, where a radar umbrella hangs shattered in its moorings, now deaf to the war unfolding across the scrub-dotted plains below.

Until the end of August, Mount Borfiq was an Ethiopian base.

Along with the concrete bunkers and barbed wire fences of the tank installations in the nearby town of Jijiga, it constituted the eastern defense of the Ethiopian army and, as the insurgents maintain, the means by which Addis Ababa imposed its rule on the impoverished Somali people who live in the region.

At 8,000 feet, the mountain is the highest in eastern Ethiopia. Its nearly vertical approaches and command of the key Kara Marda pass make it an ideal and seemingly impregnable observation point.

Jama Hassan, the mustachioed field commander of the Western Somali liberation front, says the insurgents made two unsuccessful attempts to storm the installation before finally overwhelming the opposition.

The Somalis struck at night during a rainstorm, taking the 400 Ethiopian troops by surprise. About 300 of them were killed and the rest escaped. Eighty Somalis died.

Mount Borfiq is a memorial in a war that is far from over. Written in the debris of this shattered radar station is the story of broken friendships and shifting allegiances.

An American M41 tank of the Ethiopian army once guarded the installation's approach road, which was cut from the sheer walls of red clay and rock. It had taken a direct hit, and its four-man crew entombed in the wreckage.

The radar station bears the unmistakable look of an American installation, a legacy of the deep U.S. commitment to the Ethiopian regime, a commitment which came unstrung only six months ago.

The modular radar system is housed in pink trailers, each emblazoned with the legend: Made by Westinghouse, Baltimore, Maryland.

Bullet holes pock the rows of electronic gadgetry. A long forgotten flight path disappears in the gaping hole left by the implosion of a tracking screen.

In the concrete bunkers where the soldiers lived, half eaten American C-rations testify to the surprise of the Somali attack. Photographs pinned to camp trunks show close-cropped young men strutting and posing for a relative's camera.

"It's your head," says a Pentagon pamphlet on the proper use of American helmet liners, now trampled in the debris of the barracks.

Hundreds of unused American shells are dumped aimlessly alongside the road that rings the base, the black cardboard sheaths that protect them still intact.

Nearby are similar shells, but the print is in Cyrillic. "For use in artillery or tank guns of 70mm," the Russian inscription says.

Soviet antitank missiles, designed to be launched from the shoulder, sit snugly in their packing cases, a recent gift from Moscow now that the Americans have been forced out.

Peckinpah movie hit in Chile

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — The movie "Iron Cross," directed by Sam Peckinpah, may be one of the box-office hits of 1977 in Chile.

Long lines formed recently at theaters when the World War II drama of German soldiers on the Russian front premiered here.

An anti-aircraft gun points impotently toward the sky, its face covered in Chinese characters.

The Ethiopian soldiers, profoundly aware of the shifting currents of power in the region, have been indiscriminate: the largesse of three benefactors has been left to rot in the mud.

In the deep, cool concrete shelters of the 10th brigade of the Ethiopian 3rd army division, long rows of wooden crates marked by an American flag and hands clasped in friendship are among the last surviving reminders of the Ethiopian presence at Jijiga, once a town of 70,000 people.

High explosives and land mines are scattered about as if the work of a drunken quartermaster rather than a re-treating army.

Neither the Ethiopians who abandoned them or the Somalis who conquered them seem to have given the vast arms stores much thought.

Hassan picked up a Soviet antitank missile from its wooden cradle and candidly admitted that he did not know what it was.

"This is not only a war of weapons," the commander says. "This is a war of people against their oppressors."

The rhetoric aside, the people on Hassan's side of the war are Somalis. They sing, chant and speak in Somali. They are proud and fiercely nationalistic.

The people of this region are mostly tied to their land, as unforgiving as it is. They nurture small herds of humped back cattle and tend subsistence crops — a notable exception being the intoxicating leaves known as khat, which are chewed throughout the Horn of Africa.

On one wall of a hotel in Jijiga, a Somali has answered the irresistible urge of soldiers since organized warfare began: "11.9.77. Afdam Cismam Bayaad."

The hotel has been looted down to the cushions of the chairs, but oddly the chairs themselves remain. Over the empty bar hangs a pastoral Ethiopian scene, courtesy of Mohammed's Jijiga Shell station.

The streets of Jijiga are a morass after seven days of steady rain. The stench of open sewage canals along the roads chokes the senses.

Bare-footed children wearing Soviet infantry helmets surround the occasional foreigner offering looted packets of cigarettes for sale. They take Somali shillings but give change in Ethiopian dollars.

The town's small hospital has been empty since an Ethiopian air raid two weeks ago scored a direct hit, killing nine people. One of the town's two doctors was among the wounded.

The injured and infirm are now in three motels where flies form black carpets along the still forms. The unwounded doctor says he is operating without anesthesia and the wounded have no drugs.

There are no seriously wounded soldiers here, he says — most of the patients have malaria. The serious cases have been moved to Hargeisa, in Somalia, a punishing nine-hour drive by land-rover.

Old men and young children mount a half-hearted display for visiting journalists, driving back and forth on tractors waving an assortment of rusty old Russian arms. Jijiga fell to the Somalis two months ago and there are no soldiers here today.

Sadat's offer to go to Jerusalem eases threat of fifth war

By WALTER LOGAN
UPI Foreign Editor

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin's official welcome to Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's offer to go to Jerusalem and discuss Middle East peace has eased the threat of a fifth Arab-Israeli war.

The dramatic and unprecedented developments came at a time when prospects for resumption of the Geneva Middle East peace talks were fading. U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim was quoted only last week as saying a new Geneva conference was the Mideast's last chance for peace.

The alternative, he said, was too horrible to contemplate. Those words were echoed by Begin in an interview Monday night with CBS Evening News when he, too, said "...if we can't achieve peace...it will be horrible. Believe me, horrible."

Waldheim breathed a sigh of relief at U.N. headquarters in New York Tuesday and said through a spokesman, "The Secretary General considers this to be an important development which could influence the further efforts towards peace in the area."

The dimming of prospects for a Geneva conference this fall, the continuing Israeli clashes with Palestinian guerrillas in southern Lebanon, with the constant threat of an Israeli-Syrian clash in the area, and the never ending Arab-Israeli propaganda warfare had all the ingredients for a new war.

The situation became so serious on Monday that the State Department said Secretary of State Cyrus Vance was considering another Middle East mission early in the New Year to try to patch up the American peace initiative. Tuesday the State Department was so stunned an official could only say, "We're trying to assess the situation."

Whether the Sadat-Begin talks would solve the situation remained to be seen. Diplomats at the United Nations said the watchword seems to be "watch Tunis" — where the Arab League has been in session to try to come up with a united front in the continuing Arab-Israeli tension.

Some diplomats attached considerable significance to the fact the Arab League postponed its next meeting for

Feb. 15 — a political victory for Sadat since it would give him time to explore his own avenues to peace. Some diplomats said the Sadat-Begin talks and the new Arab League meeting could bring about resumption of the formal Geneva conference.

The Arabs and the Israelis have been at odds on composition of the Geneva conference and Israeli opposition to any participation by the Palestinian Liberation Organization. Sadat may have solved that by proposing that an American of Palestinian origin represent the Palestinians.

The official Egyptian Middle East News Agency identified him Tuesday as Prof. Edward Said, a professor of English literature at Columbia University in New York. He would still have to be approved by the Israelis.

Begin went before the Knesset in Jerusalem Tuesday to break decades of precedent and extend his formal welcome to Sadat. Then Begin spoke off-the-cuff and extended verbal invitations to Syrian President Hafez Assad, King Hussein of Jordan and Lebanese President Elias Sarkis.

Sadat has perhaps a greater stake in peace than any other Arab leader. Egypt cannot afford a war now, and negotiations have brought him $3.5 billion in U.S. aid. In addition, the agreements with Israel have so far brought reopening of the Suez canal and the return of the Abu Rodeis and Ras Sudar oil fields.

Israel, according to a recent Pentagon estimate, is 60 per cent stronger militarily than it was at the beginning of the 1973 war. Egypt, by that same estimate, is 10 per cent weaker than it was in 1973.

An option you can't refuse

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Last Monday night, television viewers had an option of watching filmed violence in "The Godfather" or live violence in a professional football game between Dallas and St. Louis.

I opted to switch back and forth between the two. For the benefit of those who saw neither, here is a brief resume:

Basically, it was a story of a violent clash between two rival gridiron gangs, or "families" — the Cardinales and the Bovaros.

In the opening sequence, the "capo," or boss, of the Bovaro family is seen on the "linea laterale" (sideline). Thin-lipped and jut-jawed, he rarely changes expressions. There is something about him that is vaguely sinister. It may be his snap-brimmed hat, which went out of style about 30 years ago.

Occasionally, he turns and gives terse instructions to the "vice-direttores" and other "associari" (assistants).

During a "tempo spento" (time out), the capo is approached by the family's "quarto dorso" (quarterback). "Godfather."

"Yes, my son, what can I do for you?"

"Godfather, I need your help to take my 'unita' (unit) across the 'linea porta' (goal line) and into the 'termine zona' (end zone)."

"But is that termine zona not occupied by a unita of the Cardinales?"

"Yes, Godfather."

"And do you know what it would mean if a unita of the Bovaros were to trespass upon the termine zona of the Cardinales?"

"Yes, Godfather. I am well aware of the consequences. After the next 'pedata remoto' (kickoff), the Cardinales will feel honor bound to retaliate by crossing the linea porta of the Bovaros."

The capo nods and sighs. "And yet you are nevertheless determined to go ahead?"

"Yes, Godfather. It is something that I desire very strongly."

"Very well, my son. We'll make you a 'gioco progetto' (game plan) that can't lose."

The capo beckons to his vice-direttores and other associari. They put their heads together over the family "dramma libre" (play book). There is an animated discussion. Finally the capo turns back to the quarto dorso.

"This means, my son, that we must go to the 'facile da caccia' (shotgun formation)."

"Thank you, Godfather. I shall never forget this favor. Now I must return to my unita, for the 'arbitro' is about to blow his 'fischietto' to signal the end of the tempo spento."

As the quarto dorso trots back to rejoin his unita, the camera shifts to the "applauso guidas" (cheerleaders) whose blouses exhibit a stunning expanse of "nudo petto" (translation unavailable).

Figuring the rest would be anti-climax, I turned off the set and went to bed.

Education grants available

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Education Editor

High school seniors down about no money for education after graduation ought to ask Uncle Sam for a Basic Educational Opportunity Grant.

For eligible students, this adds up to "free" money — a gift from the United States government.

Grants range from about $200 to $1,400 per academic year. Each eligible student is entitled to no more than four full school years of Basic grant payments.

The grant can be used to help pay tuition, fees, room, board, books, supplies and miscellaneous education expenses.

Students already enrolled in college or some other post-secondary schooling know about these grants and how to apply once they have gotten the initial one. They are guided by the school's Financial Aid Department.

High school seniors may be at a disadvantage — not knowing, for example, that the deadline for applying for the 1977-78 academic year is March 15, 1978. This report is for them.

Applications now being accepted cover enrollment up to June 30, 1978. The high school guidance department is the best place to get the application.

Eligibility is determined by meeting "all" of the following criteria:

1. Students have established financial need by means of the Basic Grant application. Information must be given about the student's financial condition and that of parents.

2. Student will be enrolled in an undergraduate course of study and has not previously received a bachelor's degree.

3. Student will be enrolled on at least a half time basis in an eligible program at one of the more than 5,000 colleges, universities, vocational, technical or career training schools which have been determined eligible for the Basic Grant Program.

4. Students are United States citizens or are in the United States for more than a temporary purpose and intend to become a permanent resident.

5. Students have had no more than four full years of grant payments.

Six weeks after the application is mailed to Basic Grants, P.O. Box B, Iowa City, the applicant will be sent a Student Eligibility Report.

This official notification of eligibility will be accompanied by a set of instructions on how to proceed from that point.

The school in which you are to enroll will have a Student Financial Aid Office. That is where you deliver your notification of grant eligibility.

Up to this point you don't know how much your grant will be. The amount will be calculated by the proper person in the financial Aid Office.

The basic grant award will be paid by your school. It may be credited to your account, paid directly by check or by a combination of these methods.

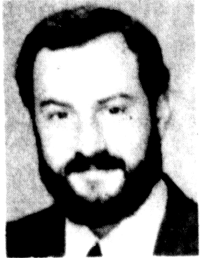

The Basic Education Opportunity Grant is intended to be the "floor" of a financial aid package for needy students. It usually is combined with other forms of aid and some work to meet the full costs of education.

Financial aid also may be available to needy students through states having scholarship or other financial aid programs. The school you're interested in attending also probably has sources of financial aid and work-study programs.

The important thing for high school seniors needing financial help: explore every possible source of aid as soon as possible.

Stiff taxes on traveling
MANILA, The Philippines (UPI) — Stiff government taxes are being enforced for Filipinos and foreign residents in the Philippines traveling abroad.

The taxes, as high as $528 per head for first-class travelers, were imposed as part of the Philippine government's drive to cushion the possible effects on the country's foreign exchange reserves by the lifting of the five-year-old martial law ban on tourist travel. The lowest travel tax in effect was $107 for economy-class travel covering tickets valued up to $660.

Veterinarian's corner

MICHAEL N. ROMANO, DVM
Dear Dr. Romano:

I have a 5-month-old female dog and my husband has told me it would be better for her to have a litter before we get her fixed. I lost a dog I loved very much when she tried to have puppies, and I am worried the same thing will happen again. What is the best thing to do?

B.B.

Dear B.B.:

Perhaps the most common question I am asked, other than when a puppy should have vaccinations and be wormed, is the best time to have a pet neutered. You have also posed another problem and that is the consequences of pregnancy.

Ideally, the best time to have a female spayed (neutered) is between 5½ to 6 months of age, which is before her first heat. The reproductive system is mature by this time and many problems can be avoided by spaying at this age. The greatest advantage is that the surgery is easier on the dog.

A young dog recovers from surgery much more quickly than an older dog. An added advantage to spaying is that it greatly reduces the chance of breast cancer in the female. All of us are aware of the growing problem of breast cancer in the human female, but it comes as an unpleasant surprise to many pet owners that dogs also fall victim to this killer.

Some of the medical problems that arise from pregnancy can be very serious, indeed fatal, if the dog is not treated. For instance, if a large male mates with a smaller female, it is termed "mismatching." Mismatching can produce puppies too large for the mother to deliver. When this occurs, a caesarian must be performed or the mother will die. Even when mismatching has not occurred, a puppy may get lodged in the birth canal which would prevent a successful birth. Again, a caesarian would be necessary.

Occasionally, even if birth has been successful, infection can be introduced into the uterus where it grows quietly until it reaches a critical point, several weeks later. Often surgical correction by spaying is the only solution, but is much more risky because the dog is very sick from the infection and a poor candidate for surgery. Infection of the uterus (pyometria) can also occur in a female after she has had a normal heat period but has not become pregnant. Spaying a dog or cat when young is less risky than pregnancy.

Another advantage of a spayed animal is that you don't have every male dog in the neighborhood courting your female on your door step. And a word must be said in favor of spaying by anyone who has had the job of cleaning up after a female in heat: active bleeding by the female usually continues for two weeks. If your dog has gone into heat, it is best to wait 4 to 6 weeks before the spay is performed.

In summary:

Spay before the first heat, at age 5½ to 6 months. If the dog is older, the surgery will be easier on her if it is performed 4 to 6 weeks after her last heat period. Be aware of the fact that the routine spay is less risky than pregnancy.

Please address any questions to Dr. Michael Romano, c/o The Pocono Record, 511 Lenox St., Stroudsburg, Pa. 18360.

'Close Encounters of Third Kind' a colossal entertainment

By DAVID DUGAS
NEW YORK (UPI) — "Close Encounters of the Third Kind," Steven Spielberg's $19 million movie about flying saucers, is just what it's supposed to be, a colossal entertainment that will be around for years (unless space creatures really do arrive, in which case all bets are off).

If it doesn't quite match "2001" for cerebral elegance, it nevertheless is far grander than Spielberg's previous movie, "Jaws," and vastly more absorbing than "Star Wars."

The theme — man's encounter with extraterrestrial beings — will sound deceptively familiar. And to give away details would rob the story (also by Spielberg) of some of its genuine surprises. Suffice to say the classic genre is given brilliant new dimensions here.

Richard Dreyfuss, as an electric company lineman, Melinda Dillon as the mother of a 3-year-old son, Francois Truffaut as a French scientist and Teri Garr as Dreyfuss' wife top the large and excellent cast.

But it is the 70mm photography (principally credited to Vilmos Zsigmond), special effects (Douglas Trumbull), musical score (John Williams) and nearly overwhelming sound that combine to make "Close Encounters" the most exciting movie of the year.

One major sequence involving musical communication with a mammoth spacecraft is one of the most imaginative and exciting ever achieved.

One notices only afterwards that in "Close Encounters" at no time do the characters pause for sex or remove their clothes, no one is killed or maimed and there is no vulgar language worth noting. Sturdy eardrums are required although the Dolby sound tends to seep right in through one's pores.

"Close Encounters of the Third Kind" (135 minutes) is a Columbia Picture rated PG.

NEW YORK (UPI) — It sounded too good to be true: Anne Bancroft and Shirley MacLaine in a drama played out against the world of American ballet. Bancroft as a great ballerina at the end of her dancing career, MacLaine as the old friend who abandoned her own career for marriage and a family.

With the stylish Herbert Ross directing, his ex-ballerina wife Nora Kaye as a producer and young Nureyev challenger Mikhail Baryshnikov prominently featured, "The Turning Point" hardly could miss being one of the year's most outstanding and original movies.

It doesn't, of course. In a movie year noted chiefly for the box office grosses of "Star Wars," "The Turning Point" is a wonderful picture.

It could have been better without the embarrassing moments in Arthur Laurents' script — as when MacLaine's ballerina daughter (beautifully played and danced by Leslie Browne of the American Ballet Theater) downs 20 Manhattan cocktails and then stumbles through a performance. And there is a soap opera quality to the climactic confrontation between Bancroft and MacLaine ("If I hadn't been pregnant they'd have used me instead!").

Also on the negative side are the washed out photography and the occasional confusing jump from one scene to another, apparently the penalties of a limited budget.

But this is carping. On balance, "The Turning Point" offers a fascinating backstage look at ballet. And there is the considerable bonus of glimpsed performances by several of America's most respected dancers including Alexandra Danilova.

Baryshnikov, who more than three years ago followed the lead of Rudolf Nureyev and fled Russia for the West, has a way to go in the acting department. But the film does allow him to demonstrate, at 29, why he is widely considered the most exciting male dancer today.

"The Turning Point" (118 minutes) is a 20th Century-Fox picture rated PG.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Maybe it actually could happen. Maybe, as in the opening of Neil Simon's movie comedy

"The Goodbye Girl," a 33-year-old divorcee would let her 10-year-old daughter read her the goodbye letter that has been left by her departing lover.

Considering the letter's contents, I doubt it. But speaking of contents, what the letter doesn't say is that said departed lover has rented the New York apartment to a fellow actor who is going to arrive any moment, expecting to find it vacant.

Simon and director Herbert Ross very nicely avoided that sort of super-contrived plotting in their warm and witty collaboration, "The Sunshine Boys." "The Goodbye Girl," alas, embraces contrivance as if it were the long lost son of "The Out of Towners."

That's not to say that Marsha Mason, Simon's actress wife, and Richard Dreyfuss don't perform this material very well. They do. There is even a certain believability in their developing romance. But "The Goodbye Girl" is chiefly a script full of funny dialogue without being an especially funny movie.

Anyone who has ever found himself trapped for more than two minutes with a self-absorbed actor will recognize the insufferable character played by Dreyfuss. He is perfect, which is to say one quickly wishes he would find a good steady job, perhaps in a road company of "The Fantasticks" touring Peru.

Mason, as a unemployed Broadway chorus dancer, manages to be very likeable despite a haircut that makes her look like Robert De Niro (it's bizarre to recall those stories that "The Goodbye Girl" evolved from another movie Simon had intended to make, "Bogart Slept Here," until De Niro walked out in a beef with that project's director, Mike Nichols).

It is hard to know what to make of young Quinn Cummings as Mason's very precocious and chatty daughter. She very likely is a terrific actress but she has been given so much smartass Simon dialogue one comes away mostly impressed that she managed to get it all out.

"The Goodbye Girl" (110 minutes) is a Warner Brothers picture rated PG.

NEW YORK (UPI) — "Semi-Tough," Dan Jenkins' comic novel about professional football, had wonderful characters but no story. So for their movie, director Michael Ritchie and screenwriter Walter Bernstein set out to find something for them to do. Now Billy Clyde Puckett (Bert Reynolds), playful bad-boy of a Miami team, and his philosophically minded buddy Shake Tiller (Kris Kristofferson), take turns falling in love with their gorgeous roommate, Barbara Jane Bookman (Jill Clayburgh) who is the daughter of their team's eccentric owner.

Ritchie proved very adept at making fun of such ritualized American institutions as political campaigns ("The Candidate") and teen-age beauty contests ("Smile"). "The Bad News Bears" represented a step toward commercialism. "Semi-Tough" sounded as if it might offer the best of both — an audience grabbing romance along with a cynically funny look at professional sports.

Earlier this year the Paul Newman movie directed by George Roy Hill, "Slap Shot," did just that. "Slap Shot" was a tough movie. Ritchie's is semi-tough at best. And semi-funny.

A variety of secondary characters are thrown into the fray: an arrogant Russian teammate, a takeoff on Werner Erhart and EST (featuring Burt Convy), a sadistic masseuse (allowing Reynolds a very funny scene with Lotte Lenya).

But none of this is enough to distract one from the utter predictability of the main plot — which guy gets the girl. Reynolds, Kristofferson and Clayburgh all perform to standard but somehow never quite connect. The R rating is strictly for rough language. "Semi-Tough" (108 minutes) is a United Artists picture rated R.

'Star Wars' fever spreads to Britain

By JOE KAY
LONDON (UPI) — "Star Wars" fever is spreading across the Atlantic.

Although the movie doesn't get its official British debut until next month, an 8-minute home version of the science-fiction powerhouse already is setting sales records.

"The demand is fantastic," said Peter Burt, co-director of Mountain Films Ltd., which sells the 8-minute films for $34 each retail.

"We got 1,000 prints of the movie in, and sold them in 48 hours. It's unheard of."

The film, starring Mark Hamill, Carrie Fischer and Alec Guinness, is a fantasy set in the midst of a futuristic battle for control of the galaxy between the evil forces of the galactic empire and rebels led by Ms. Fisher who plays "Princess Leia."

"Personally, I think it's bloody crazy," Burt said of people willing to spend so much for 8 minutes of viewing. That didn't stop him from ordering 3,000 more abbreviated versions of "Star Wars" plus 3,000 copies of a 400-foot version to sell for $61 each.

He said the "Star Wars" home version undoubtedly will surpass previous best-seller "Sound of Music," of which 3,000 copies were sold in two years.

The full-length movie, which has $176 million gross sales in the United States to date, will premier at the Dominion and Leicester Square Theaters in London Dec. 27.

Leicester House Manager Phil Logan said the theaters have received $90,000 in advance bookings so far and "hundreds of phone calls daily" and bags of mail continue to pour in for reservations.

"We've never had anything quite like it," Logan said. "We've never opened the box office three months in advance, as we did for 'Star Wars.' Normally, it would be a month to eight weeks in advance, maximum."

With the premiere scheduled for the Christmas season, Logan said he anticipates good sales of "Star Wars" momentos — cassettes, records, shirts, badges, stickers, etc. — at the theater.

The movie is scheduled to play for three months, but Logan interjected that "optimistically, it'll be six months."

A great aid in stirring pre-premiere excitement has been publicity in the newspapers, some of which have published full-color picture series from the movie. Reviews also have been published, although the movie has not yet left America.

"Star Wars" fever is spreading across the Atlantic," said Ralph Payne-Gill, proprietor of P.M. Films.

"When it starts in the U.S., it usually comes over here. Also, the fact that many of the special effects were made in this country has a lot to do with it."

Payne-Gill, whose home movie business is located in the small, rural town of Beaconsfield in Buckinghamshire, 35 miles from London, said he also has been unable to keep up with the increasing demand for home versions of the movie.

"I've sold 50 copies this week," he said. "I'm down to my last three copies. Today I ordered three dozen more."

Home movie and theater businessmen expect further jumps in the home movie demand and unmeasurably long lines at theaters next month.

As Payne-Gill lamented, "I wish I had the rights to the movie. I could retire."

Ambulance corps needs new site

STROUDSBURG — General Ambulance is searching for land to build an ambulance building or an existing structure suitable for use as an ambulance building. The parcel should be located in the Stroudsburg areas and should be large enough for erection of a 60' x 60' building plus parking for crew members' cars.

General Ambulance is presently located in the old Bridge Street Firehouse, but only on a temporary basis and must find new quarters as soon as possible.

General Ambulance is an all volunteer ambulance corp serving the Stroudsburg, Stroud Township, East Stroudsburg and surrounding areas. Crew members must in most cases, respond to the ambulance building from home or work to man the ambulance to go on the ambulance call so the new location should be easily accessible.

Anyone with any suggestions or land which they would like to donate or sell to a worthwhile volunteer group is asked to call Bill Clark at 421-9003 or Larry Ludwig at 421-3910.

Eight area students honored as Farm-City Week begins

STROUDSBURG — As a prelude to Kiwanis Farm-City Week, which the Monroe County Commissioners Thursday proclaimed would be held Nov. 18 through 24, eight area high school students were honored for outstanding achievements in agriculture, home economics and horticulture by the Kiwanis Club at a luncheon meeting this week at the Pocono Hilton.

Six students received the Vocational Merit Award and two received the 4-H Merit Award. Students receiving the Vocational Merit Award were: William Dougherty of Pocono Central Catholic vo-tech, food service; Andrew Johns of Stroudsburg High vo-tech, horticulture; Madena Bisbing of Pocono Mountain, home economics; Kellie Williams of East Stroudsburg, home economics; JoAnn Tamulis of Stroudsburg, home economics; and Peggy Bonser of Pleasant Valley, home economics. Students receiving the 4-H Merit Award were: Malinda Kresge of the Po-Ho Amigos club, agriculture and Dierdre Kirschner of the Cherry Valley Chefs club, home economics.

Special recognition was also given to the Orien Reish family at the luncheon for their exemplary achievements in Monroe County farming. Orien Reish and his wife Nona have been farming in Monroe County for the last fifty years.

Orien and Nona Reish were both born in the spring of 1900 to farming parents near Reberburg, Pa. and were married in 1918. They moved to Monroe County in 1927 and had to move from farm to farm because of hard times; until they bought their own farm, north of Glen Brook Country Club, in 1944.

Safety laws hurt Pike meal sites

MILFORD — Two communal feeding sites used by the Wayne-Pike-Monroe Area Agency on Aging in Pike County do not meet Department of Labor and Industry standards.

The result may mean AAA will have to find new quarters or ask landlords to make more than $11,000 in improvements to meet state fire and panic regulations.

The affected buildings are the Church of the Good Shepherd in Milford and the Lackawaxen Fire Hall in Lackawaxen Township.

An engineer hired by AAA to see if seven sites in Wayne and Pike counties meet department specifications estimates modifications to the church will run at least $6,200 and at least $5,000 for the fire hall.

The engineer said the church needs facilities for the handicapped, wider doors, an enclosure around the furnace and a fire-rated ceiling in the basement. Modifications to the fire hall include the same items.

After reviewing the engineer's report Thursday, Pike County Commissioners questioned whether church and fire company officials would want to spend that much money. Chairman James Duffy Jr. said the money is not in the county budget.

Commissioner Warner M. Depuy suggested the board talk with Labor and Industry about the problem.

In other business, commissioners refused to grant pay raises to about seven AAA workers because the raises are mandated by the state.

"Who the hell is the state to tell us how much we'll pay our employees?" Duffy asked of the state's mandated "merit system" pay program.

Commissioners also accepted the resignation of Marshall Anders from the county industrial authority. Anders wants to become authority attorney. Commissioners appointed Michael E. Weinstein to the authority.

Conservationist fails to win Pike support for scenic river

By JEFF WIDMER
Pocono Record Reporter

MILFORD — Designating the Delaware as a scenic river may kill the Tocks Island Dam, but it may also cheat local property owners out of just compensation for their land, the solicitor for Pike County Commissioners, John Finan, said Thursday.

Asked to support a bill to include the Delaware in the federal Wild and Scenic Rivers Act system, Finan and commissioners came up with a host of reasons why they are in no hurry to back the legislation.

After the experience with the proposed Tocks Island Dam, none of the officials trust the federal government. Promoting the bill at the commissioners' meeting was Robert Humbert of Milford, a spokesman for the Delaware Valley Conservation Association.

Humbert said inclusion of the Delaware from Hancock, N. Y. to Delaware Water Gap in the scenic system would in effect block construction of the Tocks Island Dam.

"It really blocks the most ill-considered uses of the river," Humbert said, referring to labor's contention that construction of the dam would provide jobs.

Humbert said labor's stance and one taken by planners in metropolitan New Jersey, that the dam is needed to provide water for the cities, is shortsighted and violates the rights of people living near the river.

"It's a temporary solution to the dam," Finan countered. "But we don't know what the consequences to the whole river will be," if the river were included in the scenic system.

"We cannot find what the regulations would be if it would become a scenic river," he said. "We cannot determine what would be the consequences."

Finan accused backers of the bill of "trying to come in the back door" by suggesting local townships should zone land bordering the Delaware to ban anymore construction there.

Finan said he believes if the river is included in the system, the National Park Service will take away control of the river from Pennsylvania, New York and New Jersey, and control of the land from its owners.

He said the park service would then have the power to regulate the river. That probably means the affected townships in Pike County would be required to zone the land along the river to limit growth.

If the land were zoned to impede growth, its value would drop, he said. Then, when the park service condemns property owners' land along the Delaware, owners would not receive fair compensation, he said.

Commissioner H. James Crellin said he personally is interested in the issue because he owns property along the river.

Originally, 75 miles of the Delaware running from Hancock, N. Y. to Port Jervis, N. Y. were to be included in the Wild and Scenic Rivers system.

The Final Environmental Statement drafted by the Department of the Interior calls for local zoning by townships to protect the Upper Delaware River.

U.S. Rep. Peter Kostmayer, D-Bucks, has sponsored a bill to add 37 miles of the river between Delaware Water Gap and Port Jervis to the 75-mile stretch and include both portions in the scenic system.

A public hearing on the Kostmayer bill was held last Friday in New Hope. A second is scheduled for Washington. Humbert had come to the commissioners to ask their support of the bill now.

But commissioners did not budge from their stand that they cannot endorse a bill when its consequences are unknown.

Board members said once before Congress passed innocent-looking legislation that caused the county problems. That was legislation to build the Tocks Island Dam and purchase land for the Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area.

Finan said unfavorable regulations were developed after the bill went through Capitol Hill, and said the same could happen with the bill to include the Delaware in the scenic rivers system.

Commissioners also protested the fact none of the affected townships in their territory have been invited to discuss the bill and the zoning issues.

A member of the Delaware Valley Conservation Association pointed out to commissioners two weeks ago township officials, as well as anyone else, can testify at Kostmayer's public hearings. Commissioners want hearings held in Milford.

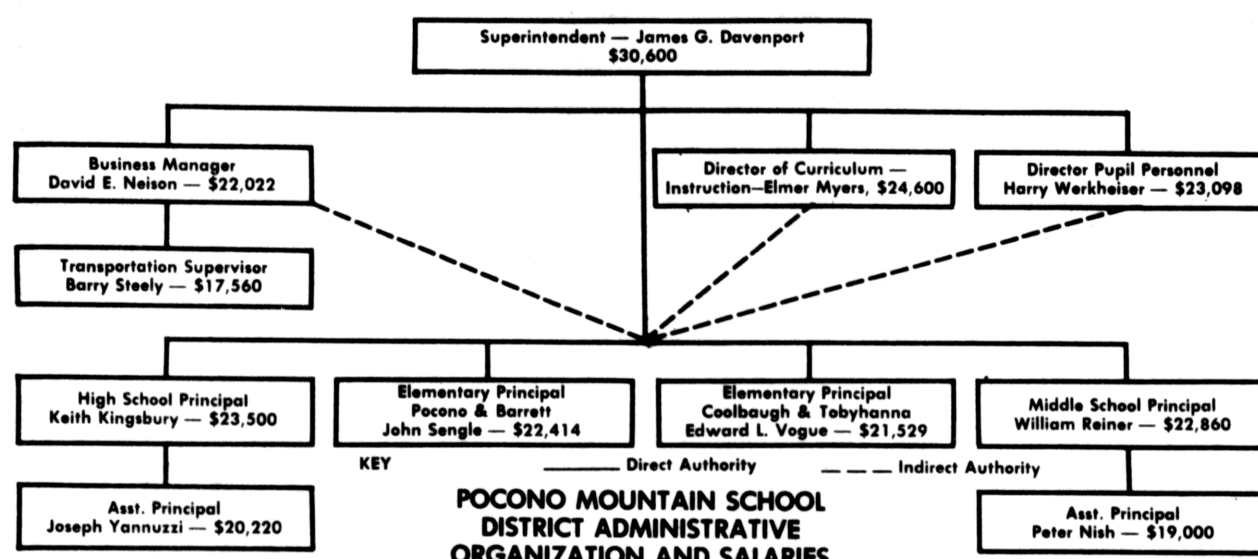

A meeting of the Upper Delaware Clearinghouse is set for noon today in the Western Hotel, Callicoon, N.Y. The scenic river proposal is on the agenda. Pike Commissioner Warner M. Depuy said local township officials have been invited to attend that meeting of Pennsylvania and New York planners.

While Humbert asked commissioners why they were not leading the fight for a scenic river, Finan turned the tables at one point and asked the conservationist why he has switched positions and now favors more governmental control over the river.

Finan said Humbert's stance now "seems inconsistent with your previous position" of fighting against Tocks Island.

Humbert said the scenic river proposal is one way to kill the dam. He also said he has seen no problems between property owners along the Lower Delaware River and the National Park Service.

Responsibility roosts here at P.M.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last in a series of articles on the administration of Monroe County public schools, who the administrators are and what problems they solve).

By JIM WOLFFE
Pocono Record Reporter

SWIFTWATER — Pocono Mountain Area School District is, in terms of land mass, the largest school district in Monroe County. According to Superintendent James Davenport, the district covers almost half of the county.

Although the district's student population has apparently stopped growing, at least temporarily, Davenport expects that enrollment will continue its upward swing as young couples move into the area.

So that residents, both new and old, will know to whom to turn when they have questions about the operation of their schools, Davenport recently explained the responsibilities of each of the district's administrators.

The district currently spends $247,403 annually for salaries for the 11 district executives, who oversee the education of 3,531 students.

As superintendent, Davenport is the highest unelected officer in the district and is responsible directly to the school board. He is charged with overseeing the operation of the entire district.

Unlike the other three Monroe County districts, principals at Pocono Mountain Schools are responsible directly to the superintendent. They report to him, instead of to an assistant.

However, Davenport does delegate some of his authority to directors. He said there is no set formula for that referral of duties, adding that he prefers to keep the operation

"flexible."

Elmer Myers, director of curriculum and instruction, is the closest thing the district has to an assistant superintendent. In general, Myers, as his title suggests, is responsible for implementing district policies regarding students' academic work.

Davenport explained that Myers also would act as superintendent if Davenport were required, for some reason, to be absent from his office for any length of time.

Harry Werkheiser, director of pupil personnel performs a number of functions for the district. He is responsible for coordinating health services, special education programs and running the cafeteria.

The business manager is David E. Nelson. He is responsible for all financial matters affecting the district, coordinates the payroll and works developing the annual budget. He also is frequently called upon to evaluate bids received by the district.

Barry Steely, who reports to Nelson, is the transportation supervisor. He is responsible for making sure the more than 30 school buses used to transport students are properly maintained and run smoothly and on time.

Pocono Mountain employs four principals to run its six school buildings.

Keith Kingsbury is the principal of the high school and is assisted by Joseph Yannuzzi. The middle school chief is William Reiner. His assistant principal is Peter Nish.

There are two elementary school principals. John Seigal is responsible for Pocono and Barrett Elementaries and Edward L. Vogue is the boss at Coolbaugh and Tobyhanna schools.

Salary increases don't pass

STROUDSBURG — A vote taken by the Stroudsburg Area School District School Board Wednesday night to raise the salaries of two of its administrators did not carry by a sufficient majority to pass, Superintendent John A. Leuenberger reported Thursday.

The board and Leuenberger had thought Wednesday night that the vote of four yes, three no and one abstention was sufficient to raise the salaries of the district's two assistant principals by $1,500.

Leuenberger said that he learned Thursday from solicitor Samuel Newman that in personnel matters, the Pennsylvania School Code requires that all actions be approved by a majority of the total school board rather than by a majority of the members present.

The board has nine members, therefore the four yes votes fell one short of the needed majority. Member Paul Edinger Jr. was absent.

Planner offers to help DWG

DELAWARE WATER GAP — Monroe County Planning Director Carl Kindred offered his services to Delaware Water Gap Thursday night during a planning appraisal before the borough's chamber of commerce.

Stating he could gather statistics to help the borough plan its future, Kindred also said he could contact federal, state and local officials to speak to the residents of Delaware

Water Gap at little or no cost.

The planning director described the borough as the slowest growing municipality in the county with the greatest percentage of housing in need of major or minor repair.

At one point, he said that if the borough continues as is, allowing minimal and scattered growth, it may face bankruptcy in 20 years.

He said that because of its size, Delaware Water Gap has a very low funding priority.

He even suggested the community might want to merge with Smithfield Township in order to meet the need for municipal services.

Monroe to ask Sen. Heinz to help save rail service

By STEVE BLAKELY
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — Railroad service in Monroe County is in a pickle, and county commissioners Thursday decided to meet with someone they hope will help — U.S. Sen. H.J. Heinz, heir to the Pittsburgh pickle fortune.

Commissioners Jesse D. Pierson and Nancy Shukaitis voted to ask for a special meeting with Heinz and local officials and businessmen because of the Consolidated Railroad's persistence in trying to stop rail service in Monroe County.

"Our entire community will be the victims of what Conrail wants to do," said Pierson. "We've got to get together and come up with a program to save the rails. It's important that we have the meeting with Heinz, but it's also important that we have something to say."

Commissioners decided to contact Heinz for the meeting after a long discussion with Dan Bogen, a retired railroad worker who has helped them in their "frustrating" dealings with Conrail.

Last year Conrail management came up with a plan to reclassify the rail line that runs from New Jersey through East Stroudsburg to Scranton, and thereby limit use of the track. Their latest proposal is to rip up a stretch of track in New Jersey, cutting Northeast Pennsylvania's link with the Newark, N.J. and New York harbors.

Bogen criticized Conrail management for being incompetent, saying the men now running Conrail are the same who ran the Pennsylvania Railroad and the New York Central into bankruptcy.

Bogen also praised Fred W. Taylor, president of the International Boiler Works in East Stroudsburg, who has been fighting to save railroad service for his industry.

"If the rails go, International Boiler Works goes," Bogen said. "Why should Monroe County citizens pay tax dollars to Conrail, just so they can pull out our rail service?"

Pierson said Conrail has been unwilling to consider potential railroad customers — both for industry and passengers — in the northeast region of the state. "At no time have we been able to impress on Conrail or Congress that potential service is important."

Protest goes to Harrisburg

Late mail campaign irks GOP

By STEVE BLAKELY
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — The chairman of the Monroe County Republican Party went to the county commissioners Thursday to complain about election tactics used by two successful Democratic candidates for township supervisor.

Edward Katz, the Republican chairman, specifically objected to letters sent out to voters in Smithfield and Hamilton townships in the closing hours of last week's election. He said the letters were "if not illegal, certainly politically immoral, since they arrived on election day and gave the opponent no chance for rebuttal."

Katz said he has checked with attorneys for the Republican Party in Harrisburg, who told him direct-mailings are in the "gray area" of the election law, and that the party has no recourse.

The letters in question were sent out by Boyde Kimmins, Democratic candidate for Smithfield Township supervisor, and Lawrence W. Snyder, Democratic candidate for Hamilton Township supervisor. Both won election to office.

Kimmins defeated his Republican opponent, Al Wilson, by a vote of 496 to 270. Snyder narrowly edged incumbent supervisor Robert W. Field out of office by seven votes, 506 to 499.

Snyder's letter outlined several issues he planned to work as supervisor, and did not mention his opponent by name. Kimmins' letter — postmarked Nov. 7, the day before the election — was harsh, attacking Wilson for defending a township ordinance that protects "special interests."

Wilson said the letter was unfair and contributed significantly to his defeat. "It should have been shown to me prior to the mailing, so I could have a chance for rebuttal."

Kimmins maintained the letters were sent out in accordance with election law, at least 48 hours before the election, regardless of when they were postmarked.

"I didn't know it was necessary to give time for rebuttal. I don't think it was unfair."

They had the opportunity to make charges against me, if they wanted to," Kimmins said.

County commissioners Jesse D. Pierson and Nancy Shukaitis, after listening to the complaints, agreed to send a letter to the state commissioner of elections in Harrisburg about the problems caused by vague wording in the state election code. They also favored Katz's suggestion that all candidates be given a copy of the election code when they pick up petitions.

"I'm certain that most candidates are not aware the election code even exists. In the heat of the campaign, they're willing to jump the gun," Katz said.

S-burg tests carry big weight

Students want finals examined

STROUDSBURG — At the regular meeting of the Stroudsburg School Board, student representative to the board Jeff Wert reported that a major concern of district high school students is the amount of weight given to final exams.

Wert told the board that he had surveyed approximately 850 students, grades 10 through 12, and found that the exam structure was their "number one concern."

Final exams currently make up 20 percent of a student's final course grade and failure of the year-end test can result in failure for the year, even if the student has a passing grade for each of the four marking periods. Wert complained.

Wert also said that many students find it "too difficult to review for the entire year," suggesting that "perhaps we should go to mid-year exams."

The board was also informed that final exams are weighted more heavily in Stroudsburg than in the other Monroe County school districts.

Wert said that East Stroudsburg has administered no finals for the past five years. Pleasant Valley has finals but they are included only as part of the fourth marking period grade and Pocono Mountain has finals, but they "are not weighted too heavily."

Wert gave the board two formal recommendations to consider. "Serious consideration should be given to the total elimination of final examinations, or if they continue to be given, they should not be counted as heavily toward your final grade, but counted as a fraction of the fourth marking period only," he said.

High School Principal Karl Dickl said Thursday that before any decision to make a change in the way finals are administered is made, he would want to consult with the high school faculty.

He said, however, that he would worry that if the importance of the exams is decreased too much, the motivation for students to study for them would be removed.

He explained that about seven years ago, the district did away with finals and then three years ago they were reinstated on the order of retired Superintendent Samuel O. Wells.

Dickl said that he would personally be opposed to doing away altogether with finals, calling them a "useful tool for evaluation" and "valuable training for students" for when they will have to take tests in college or as part of the application process for a job.

STROUDSBURG — The Stroudsburg R.D. 1 man convicted last month of kidnapping and raping of a 27-year-old woman was taken from Monroe County Jail Tuesday night to Pocono Hospital for treatment of an undisclosed ailment and returned to jail, according to hospital records.

BLAIRSTOWN, N.J. — Three Warren County, N.J., juveniles were arrested Wednesday in connection with more than 20 thefts or break-ins in the last two weeks, according to New Jersey State Police at Blairstown.

TANNERSVILLE — A simple assault charge against Joe Carliola of 1024 W. Main St., Stroudsburg, was dropped prior to his scheduled preliminary hearing Wednesday before District Magistrate Gerald Canfield in Tannersville.

Big housing bank account 'may be taxpayer rip-off'

STROUDSBURG — The Monroe County Housing Authority has a lot of money in the bank and the authority's board of directors wants to know why it's there.

"Why do we have this kind of money in there?" said authority board member Frank Carr III, chairman of the committee looking into the complaints against authority executive director Charles T. VanSciver.

Carr told authority board chairman Thomas Kistler that a deposit of $200,000 in First Eastern Bank may mean that "taxpayers are being taken,

"First Eastern Bank won't give us any information on it," Carr said. "I think that it's too much money to have on reserve."

In continuing his investigation of the deposit, Carr said he will write to First Eastern Bank for information as well and find out whether other housing authorities have proportionately large deposits.

"If every HUD authority in the country has that much money in the bank then something is wrong," Carr said.

VanSciver said the deposit is an accumulation that has come from rent money and not from federal tax revenues.

"Maybe we should have lower rent," Carr countered.

Carr said the investigation into tenants' complaints about VanSciver's management is closed because the allegations were not out of bounds of rules the board approved a year ago.

Carr also reported that it was his committee's feeling that board member Alice Patterson should have raised the criticisms of VanSciver at a board meeting and not at a meeting of Stroudsburg Borough Council.

Commissioners also hired 16 CETA workers, including: Lina Lee Ciesales and Nils Q. Barton, with the Pocono Mountains Vacation Bureau; David N. Woods, Charles R. Coco, George Kizer, Kathryn Quinn, Loretta Clare, Robert W. Getz and Lynn C. Anderson with the Housing Authority; Carol J. Zacharias and Joanne Durrell with the Drug and Alcohol program; Robert T. Brecker with the Recreation and Park program; David C. Howard and John Narciso with Polk Township; and Michael K. McPike and Anthony Staffieri with the Redevelopment Authority.

Bears, Cards clash in 17th 'Old Oaken Bucket' contest

Beating Pocono Mountain could make Bears' season

By JOE MIEGOC
Record Sports Editor

BRODHEADSVILLE — Through all the disappointments, the almosts, the let-downs, Pleasant Valley still has a shot at making its football season.

It comes as no surprise that the venue to that somewhat limited feeling of success is a victory tonight over rival Pocono Mountain in the 17th renewal of their "Old Oaken Bucket" game.

"It's the only salvation we have left in the season," said Bears' coach Tony Caracio.

"We do feel we've improved as a team in the course of the season and with a young team, climaxing the season with a win over Pocono Mountain will certainly be a plus for our program."

As strange as it may seem, Caracio is concerned that his team may not be emotionally ready for this game. That's strange in view of the intense rivalry between the two schools since the game was first played in 1961.

But it also has a lot to do with the young team Caracio has.

"Right now, we're both basically young teams," Caracio said. "In an emotional game like this, you don't know how your kids will react."

"This is the first time some of our players have even suited up for this game and with this in mind, there are a lot of uncertainties."

"I doubt we've ever gone into a game like this as young as we are," he added. "We may have had younger players, but not in terms of those who hadn't played in this game."

"Three years ago, we had some players who'd played in this game as freshmen but this year we have some sophomores who didn't even suit up last year. Because of this, they aren't aware of the type of emotional intensity this game involves."

Ironically, his young players have been some of his better offensive players.

Junior Randy Tomsic has been the Bears' top ground-gainer, averaging just under five yards a carry with 355 yards in 72 attempts. Sophomore Angelo DeLuzio isn't far behind with 349 yards in 95 carries. Quarterback Mike Gould, a senior, has 366 yards in 101 attempts.

Rich Hosking leads the pass receiving corps with 14 catches for 219 yards.

Still the Bears have scored just 78 points all year and have had their fill of costly mistakes, mistakes which will have to vanish almost overnight if they are to win this game.

"In the past three games, we've had trouble handling the ball," Caracio said. "We'll have to eliminate that and the mistakes, the jumping off-side, fumbles and so on to win. We have to be a consistent offense and this is what we've lacked."

In their last start, the Bears moved up and down the field in the first half against Slatington and had a second quarter score by Tomsic nullified by a penalty. They were dead flat in the second half and lost, 6-0.

"We can't afford to make those mistakes," Caracio said.

Cardinals are explosive

While the Bears' offense has had trouble scoring, Pocono Mountain's has been quite explosive at times. The Cardinals have averaged 25 points per game in the four games they've won, with 48 against Jim Thorpe and 33 against Notre Dame.

"Personnel-wise, they seem to be much more explosive than we are," Caracio commented.

"(Jim) Magrosky has real good speed outside and he's dangerous on the counter play, too. (Carl) Robinson gives them the inside punch and (Lloyd) Lutz has been rather consistent."

"(John) Bush has been doing an excellent job at quarterback, too. He had some problems at the beginning of the season, but he's young (a sophomore) and now seems to have control. He's running the team real well."

"(Daryl) Morrow is a receiving threat, too."

"They have some fine line-men in (Dan) Gearhart and (Glen) Pinciotti at tackles and (Jerry) Rinker and (Dan) Planer at guards. We have to be ready for just about anything."

Defensively, junior Scott Brozman leads the Bears in tackles with 80 (58 solos, 22 assists), while senior Todd Nicholas has 55 (35 solos, 20 assists), and senior Lenny Ventrone has 49 (37 solos, 12 assists).

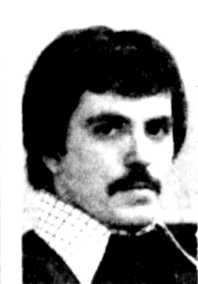

"We feel we're coming of age there," Caracio said. "Some areas need shoring up, but our defense has made tremendous progress. If we could get our offense moving in the same direction, we should be all right."

The Bears have allowed 155 points this season, not bad for a club with a 3-6-1 record, and have recorded three shutouts.

The Cardinals have not scored in this game in three years and have not won since taking a 30-12 victory, an upset at the time, in 1973. Caracio is sure Pocono Mountain has been made aware of this.

"I'm sure coach (Joe) Ortelii has been drumming this up all week," he said. "I'm sure they're very aware of it."

POCONO MOUNTAIN OVER PLEASANT VALLEY — Both teams have been having their troubles, but at this point the Cardinals have been more consistent offensively. Pleasant Valley's stronghold of late has been defense, but you can't score too often without a consistent offense and that has had a role in the Bears' troubles. Cardinals win it, 14-6.

Collegiate

OHIO STATE OVER MICHIGAN — Going out on a limb, sure, but the Buckeyes remember last year's trouncing at Columbia and want to turn the tables at Ann Arbor. Michigan may have an edge with Rick Leach if the game turns into a passing show, as some expect, but Ohio State smells the Rose Bowl again. Buckeyes win it, 20-13.

Other picks: Texas over Baylor, Millersville over Clarion, Arkansas over SMU, Michigan State over Iowa, Missouri over Kansas, Texas Tech over Houston, Colorado over Kansas State, LSU over Tulane.

Cardinals can end skid of three straight losses

By JOE DeVIVO
Record Sports Writer

SWIFTWATER — One score has been haunting Joe Ortelii for a long time. He can't forget 49-0.

The 49-0 score doesn't represent any single Pocono Mountain victory or defeat. It's the margin by which Pleasant Valley has outscored the Cardinals during Ortelii's three previous seasons as head coach.

So it's no secret Ortelii will have his players well aware of the three straight shutouts the Cardinals have suffered when they take the field at 7:30 tonight and try to win the Old Oaken Bucket for the first time since 1973.

"It's been absolutely traumatic," Ortelii says about the past three games which enabled the Bears to tie the series at eight games apiece. "You can accept one shutout, but to go three years in a row without scoring a point is almost unbelievable."

"What's even more remarkable is we haven't even had many scoring opportunities. In fact I think our deepest penetration last year was around their 35," he says. "We've forgotten what the bucket looks like, we haven't had it for so long. We've got to get the kids to remember what it looks like and win it back."

In order to accomplish their task, the Cardinals need some improved defensive play. Statistically, the Cardinals have been the area's worst defensive team, giving up an average of over 250 yards per game.

Warriors seeded first in EIAW volleyball

BINGHAMTON, N. Y. — East Stroudsburg State College will carry the number one seed into the opening rounds of the Eastern Association for Interscholastic Athletics for Women (EIAW) Small College Volleyball Championships today.

The Warriors boast a 32-10 record and are favored in a field of 16 teams. The two top finishers will qualify for the AIAW National Championships Dec. 8-10 at North Central College, Naperville, Ill.

ESSC will open pool play today at 10 a.m. against Western Maryland, ninth seeded. Other games are scheduled against Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT), fifth seeded, at 12 noon and Clarion State at 2:30 p.m.

The top two teams from each of the four pools will advance to the championship quarter-finals today at 8 p.m. The semi-finals will be conducted Saturday at 11:30 a.m. with the finals at 5:30 p.m.

George Washington is second seeded with Ithaca College third and Springfield College fourth. MIT, Yale, Princeton and York, Pa. round out the top eight.

ESSC had an 8-1 record against tournament teams during the regular seasons with two wins apiece over Ithaca,

Defense must come through

Ortelii admits he's concerned about his defense, but plans no changes for the season finale.

"The defense has been a real sore point," he says. "We made a commitment to the 5-2 and 6-2 and that's what we're sticking with. Last year we used a 5-2 but by the end of the year we ended up with about 35 different adjustments. What we were gaining in catching people by surprise we were losing in execution."

"Our defense is going to be the key," he says. "If we tackle properly and don't let people run all over the place, things should happen in our direction."

Ortelii respects quarterback Mike Gould as a running and passing threat and halfback Randy Tomsic, the Bears' leading ballcarrier, and anticipates the Bears will stick to what they do best.

"We're always aware of new wrinkles they might put in for this game, but I don't expect them to change that much," Ortelii says. "Why should they change? We have the worst defense in the league."

While the defense has been the Cardinals' weakness, the offense has been a bright area in a 4-5-1 season, and Ortelii feels the switch to the wishbone from the wing-T has been a good move.

"It's a gamble-type offense and we're happy with it," Ortelii says. "I'm positive if we weren't in this offense we wouldn't have made out as well as we have. We've been able to move the ball. When we're stopped, it's because of fumbles, interceptions, or mental mistakes."

Senior fullback Carl Robinson is the key to the wishbone attack. Robinson, who gained 62 yards on 17 carries against Stroudsburg last week, carries the ball up the middle to set up the outside running of sophomores Lloyd Lutz and Jim Magrosky. The latter has come on strong lately, including a 119-yard effort last week which included a 64-yard touchdown run.

While Magrosky and Lutz have been a pleasant surprise, so has the development of sophomore quarterback John Bush.

"He's coming along very well," Ortelii says. "He sits back under pressure and picks out a second or third receiver. We think that's pretty good for a sophomore."

PV defense puzzles Cards

The Cardinals' biggest offensive challenge tonight will be figuring out the Bears' defense.

"They change defenses a lot and we're unsure of what we'll see," Ortelii says. "They've done a much better job than us defensively and with a new offense we're not sure what they'll try to do to shut us down."

A victory tonight would give the Cardinals a .500 season, end the Bears' three-year hold on the Bucket, and give Pocono Mountain a one-game lead in the series.

But Ortelii has mixed feelings about whether that's enough to call the season an overall success.

"There are the big games we lost I feel very hurt about. We got ripped apart and there's no way we should have played that kind of football," he says. "On the other hand, I'm not sure anyone gave us a stone's throw in hell we'd be close to .500 this year."

"We only have ten people from last year's roster of 40 players. From that standpoint, what we've done has to make us happy."

The biggest step forward Ortelii's seen, however, doesn't have anything to do with on-the-field performance.

"The attitude has made me as happy as a lark," he says. "The players now know what it is to have the proper attitude. That's the kind of thing, we've been trying to foster for three years."

Ortelii needs just one more thing to make him happier. A season-ending victory.

Brooks completes career

LOCK HAVEN — Former Stroudsburg High School player Joe Brooks recently closed a four-year collegiate career at Lock Haven State College in third place on the Eagles' all-time pass receiving list.

Brooks caught 28 passes this season for 476 yards as the Eagles compiled a 5-5 record, their first non-losing campaign in six years.

Those totals gave Brooks a four-year total of 65 receptions for 1,158 yards and eight touchdowns.

Brooks was also featured on the cover of the game program for Lock Haven's season-ending home contest with Indiana University of Pennsylvania.

Redskins dispute list of salaries

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Tim Temerario, the Washington Redskins' chief contract negotiator, said Thursday a newspaper story listing players' individual salaries was "a fishing expedition."

However, he refused to discuss the Washington Post's claim that the Redskins' total player payroll is $3.6 million, highest in the 28-team NFL.

"The figures were completely inaccurate. It's a fishing expedition," said Temerario, an executive assistant to Redskins' Coach and General Manager George Allen.

The story — which the Post said was pieced together from interviews with present and former players and other sources — said fullback John Riggins is the highest paid Redskins, making about $300,000 a year. He is currently sidelined with a knee injury.

Reserve quarterback Billy Kilmer is next at $210,000, followed by wide receiver Charley Taylor at $135,000. Running backs Calvin Hill and Mike Thomas and safety Jake Scott FOILED — Flyers' goalie Bernie Parent falls to the ice to stop this first period shot Thursday night by New York's Bill Harris. Flyers rallied from a 3-0 deficit with four third period goals but the Islanders salvaged a 4-4 tie on a goal with 10 seconds left.

Delaware Valley advances in state hockey tourney

SPECIAL TO THE RECORD — SHIPPENSBURG — Delaware Valley scored twice in the game's first 11 minutes and added three more goals in the final eight minutes of play Thursday to overwhelm Avonworth, 5-0, and gain a berth in the PIAA field hockey tournament's semifinal round.

The Warriors, now 19-0, advance to face District 3 champion Cedar Crest at 11 a.m. today. Another victory would vault the District 12 champions into the championship game at noon Saturday.

Sue Lapriore opened the scoring after just six minutes and Lynette Kyle added a goal after 11 minutes of the first half to give Delaware Valley a 2-0 edge at halftime.

Betsy Rutkowski's goal opened the second half scoring after 17 minutes had elapsed and Jill Ridley then got her first of two goals a minute later. Ridley's second score completed the scoring with two minutes remaining in the game.

"They (Avonworth) had the potential to score at any time," said Delaware Valley coach Jan Edwards, "and the game could have switched quickly."

"But our girls played a good game and kept control of it at all times."

Delaware Valley, which had lost a first-round game in last year's tournament to Springfield on penetration time, held an advantage which climbed to nearly eight minutes this time. The Warriors totaled nine minutes, 13 seconds of penetration time while District 7 champion Avonworth had just 1:38.

The Warriors also held a distinct advantage on shots on goal, launching 20 to just three by Avonworth. Delaware Valley goalie Anita Emery had to make just two saves.

All tournament games are being played at Shippensburg State College.

White Sox sign free agents Blomberg, Hughes, Scheuler

CHICAGO (UPI) — Chicago White Sox President Bill Veeck spent "more money than we can afford" Thursday to sign three of the 42 free agents drafted by the White Sox to multi-year contracts.

The Sox added outfielder-first baseman Ron Blomberg from the New York Yankees and two right-handed pitchers, Ron Schueler and Jim Hughes, both from the Minnesota Twins.

Blomberg indicated he received a three-year, no-cut, no-trade contract for more than $600,000.

Veeck said all three players signed contracts for more than one year, but would not reveal details on length or price. He said only that it cost "more money than we can afford."

Blomberg, who has not played since 1976 and who has been on the disabled list due to a shoulder injury since April 1, has a batting average of .302 in the major leagues. Schueler was 8-7 with a 4.41 ERA with the Twins last year and Hughes 9-10 with a 5.15 ERA with the Twins' Tacoma farm team.

"To replace some of the power we lost when our great heroes became free agents," Veeck said, "we signed Blomberg, and Schueler and Hughes will bulk up the pitching staff. If we don't have all that power, we're going to have to depend on something else."

Veeck said one of the factors in signing the players was the way "our fans performed last year ... we owe it to the White Sox fans to sign players to make our task easier."

"I think we have improved our club and I think we will improve it more."

Veeck said "it was a reasonable assumption" that the Sox might sign one or two more players. He noted there is still room on the Sox' roster.

He said the Sox received good reports on Blomberg's hitting during spring training and "we tucked it away in the back of our head."

"When he became available, we did not think an injury or two would make that much difference," Veeck said.

Spinks or Righetti to get shot at Ali

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Heavyweight boxers Leon Spinks and Alfio Righetti, who meet in a nationally televised 10-round fight tonight, may have more than each other on their minds.

The winner of the fight between Olympic champion Spinks, 5-0-1, and the 27-0, ninth-ranked contender from Rimini, Italy, has been promised a Feb. 15 title shot at Muhammad Ali by promoter Bob Arum.

Spinks, 24, a 201-pound ex-Marine from St. Louis, is a solid favorite to hand the 217-pound Righetti his first loss.

But he said Thursday he won't think too much about Ali until he gets done with Righetti.

"I'm not taking nobody lightly," said Spinks, who registered five knockout victories

"Had we not lost Richie Zisk and Oscar Gamble, we still would have had him high on our list. He has the ability to pop a ball, and I don't think he's begun to approach his potential. He's going to become a fine hitter."

Blomberg, who had an operation on his shoulder, said he has been hitting for two weeks as well as running and "my shoulder is as good as ever. I'm going to give 110 percent. I don't want to be Richie Zisk or Oscar Gamble. I want to be myself."

Hughes said it was "not true" that he had a sore arm, rumored last spring before he was sent to Tacoma.

All three players had offers from other teams before agreeing to the White Sox contracts. Schueler said he had been drafted by nine teams and got offers from three of them. Hughes said three teams also made offers to him.

Blomberg said he received six offers, and that he had talked to the Yankees. He said he told the Yankees he wanted to get out of their organization "so they don't want to talk to me any more."

Islanders' goal foils comeback by Flyers

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Brian Trottier's goal with just 10 seconds left in the game Thursday night earned the New York Islanders a 4-4 tie with the Philadelphia Flyers, who had wiped out a 3-0 deficit with a dramatic four-goal surge in the final period.

With several of his teammates sprawled in front of the Flyers' net, Trottier pushed his 13th goal of the season past goalie Bernie Parent.

The Flyers, trailing 3-0, began their scoring barrage early in the third period when Reggie Leach smashed the puck off goalie Chico Resch and into the net. Ross Lonsberry followed with a goal at 5:35 and Bobby Clarke tied the game on a power-play goal at 15:29, tipping in a drive by Rick MacLeish. A little more than a minute after Clarke's goal, Philadelphia went ahead 4-3 on Bill Barber's rebound shot.

The Islanders had taken a 3-0 lead with first-period goals by Mike Bossy, the NHL's leading rookie scorer, and Trottier. Bossy scored the first goal by hitting the puck off Parent's left skate into the net. Trottier scored on a rebound shot at 19:24 and Bossy added another goal at 11:28 of the second period.

Bruins tie Canucks

BOSTON (UPI) — Stan Jonathan and Jean Ratelle scored goals ten seconds apart in the final period Thursday night to pull the Boston Bruins to a 4-4 tie with the Vancouver Canucks.

At 18:11 of the final period, Bruin forward Jonathan ripped the puck into the net.

Billy Knight, who hit 11 straight points in one stretch for the Braves, then led a Buffalo comeback that put the Braves ahead 98-95 with 7:38 remaining. San Antonio ran off 10 straight points to get back into the contest and finally took the lead for good with 14 seconds left with Dietrick's free throws.

Larry Kenon led the Spurs with 30 points and 13 rebounds while George Gervin hit 28 points, 12 of them in the last quarter surge until he fouled out with 1:14 left in the game.

Jazz, 127-116

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Leonard "Truck" Robinson scored 33 points and Nate Williams and Jim McElroy combined for 43 more Thursday night to lead the New Orleans Jazz to a 127-116 win over the Seattle Supersonics.

Pete Maravich, the NBA's No. 2 scorer with a 26.9 per game average, attempted just five field goals and made four for a total of eight points. Maravich, who played 37 minutes, had 15 assists.

home his fifth goal of the season to make the score 4-3 Vancouver.

Ratelle tied the game after linemate Don Marcotte fed the veteran center a Bob Schmautz rebound, allowing him to fake Vancouver goalie Cesar Maniago out of position and flip the puck over his outstretched body.

The Canucks appeared to have the game in hand when Mike Walton and Dennis Vergeert scored second period goals to make the score 3-1.

The Canucks got their two-goal lead back when Larry Blight slapped home a 20-foot power play goal with less than six minutes left in the game.

Maple Leafs, 2-1

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI) — Ron Ellis' first period power-play goal gave the Toronto Maple Leafs a 2-1 victory over the Buffalo Sabres Thursday night to tie the two teams for the lead in the Adams Division.

Ellis scored at the 15:22 mark on a disputed goal. The veteran wing tipped in a rebound of a shot by Darryl Sittler but Sabres goalie Don Edwards apparently kicked out the shot. Referee Bruce Hood, however, ruled that the puck had crossed the goal line before Edwards' save attempt.

The Sabres opened the scoring at 3:32 of the first period when Don Luce deflected Jos Guevremont's shot past Leafs goalie Mike Palmateer. Less than five minutes later, Toronto tied it when Pat Boutette tipped in a shot from the left point by Ian Turnbull.

Flyers sign Czech

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Defenseman Rudolf Tjcnar, who defected from his native Czechoslovakia, has been signed to a contract with the Philadelphia Flyers, it was announced Thursday.

General Manager Keith Allen said Tjcnar, a standout on the Olympic and National Czechoslovakian team for years, had negotiated with the Flyers over a 10-day period.

Tjcnar, 29, had been considered the best defenseman for the Slovak Bratislava team in the Czechoslovakian hockey league in which he played from 1966 to 1977. At 5-foot-11, 225 pounds, he becomes one of the heaviest players in pro hockey.

Flunking kindergarten

Dear Ann Landers: While visiting in a neighboring state my husband and I were having breakfast at a table next to three women who had not seen each other for quite some time. One of the women said, "I had the greatest disappointment of my life last Spring. My grandson flunked kindergarten."

Being a first-grade teacher I wanted to tell her that the child's parents should have kept the boy home another six months or maybe a year. There is nothing magic about a fifth birthday. Some children are ready for kindergarten at four and others are not ready until six.

"Flunking" kindergarten is sometimes the biggest favor a teacher can do for a child. To send a youngster on to the first grade when he or she is not ready can be a grave disservice. The unprepared child who can't keep pace with his peers becomes frustrated and learns to hate school. That one year can make a big difference in the life of a little person. Parental pride can be a very damaging thing.

A Teacher In Kansas

Dear Teacher: I'll bet a lot of maligned kindergarten teachers are delighted you wrote. So am I. Thank you for some solid input.

Dear Ann Landers: The letter from the woman who had been bugged for years because she didn't know whether her two children were both born on Sunday prompted me to write my first letter to a newspaper.

I know a lot of people look on you as a friend, Ann, but for the love of Mike, why do they bother you with stuff like that when there are people waiting in every public library in the country to answer such questions?

Librarians are trained to dispense information on almost any subject you can think of. We love our work and enjoy looking up answers. So please print this letter and encourage the public to telephone us when they want to know something. Thanks, friend.

Durham, N.C.

Dear Durham: I wish the person who wrote to me and asked for a good meat loaf recipe had called HER librarian. Thanks for your letter, honey — but where were you when I needed you?

CONFIDENTIAL to Not Laughing: Nobody says you have to laugh, but a sense of humor can be a life-saver when you bump up against the type of situation you are facing. It can help you overlook the unattractive, tolerate the unpleasant and cope with the unexpected. Laughter and tears are often separated by a very thin line... and it's always better to laugh than cry.

Dear Ann Landers: I have this terrible need to express my feelings. Please let me do it through your column.

My mother died yesterday. She suffered a great deal of pain for a long time. The worst agony for her was knowing that she was causing all of us a lot of anxiety over her terminal illness. She knew we loved her very much. Mom took her own life. It was not reported as such (she swallowed a whole bottle of pills) but a lot of people who visited her recently had an idea that she would do something like that.

Already seven people have telephoned and three have come in person to ask for details about how Mom died. I feel it is none of their business. Please tell me what to say to them.

Sixteen And All Cried Out

Dear Sixteen: Say, "Mom died peacefully." Nothing more need be added. Clods who press for details should be answered by a long period of silence. It can be the most effective response of all.

CONFIDENTIAL to Brain-Drained And Depending On You: A hilarious book for cheering up your house-bound friend (or anyone) is Art Buchwald's 25-year collection of columns: "Down The Seine And Up The Potomac" — Publisher, Putnam: Price $10.95. It's a side splitter.

Recordings

Writing is lonely.

I guess I never realized how much until I found myself saying to my tropical fish yesterday, "Whatya wanta talk about, Lester, the Panama Canal or Liz Taylor's Avon lady?"

When the fish surfaced and blew a couple of bubbles, I said, "If you're going to talk dirty, I'll call Estelle."

The phone rang twice and Estelle said, "Thanks for calling."

"So, what's happening?" I asked.

"At the tone will you please leave your name and phone number and I'll return your call."

"This is a crisis center," I said angrily. "You crisis is ready."

I dialed the number of another friend. "I'm sorry," said the operator, "but that number is no longer in service. If you wish assistance, please remain on the line."

"Thank you," I said, "but my mother doesn't like me to talk to strange recordings."

I got on a bus and went into town. "Hello there," I said to the bus driver. He pointed to the sign that said, "No talking permitted to the bus driver."

When I arrived at the department store, I took an elevator where a recording told me to please stand clear of the door and face the front. I said "thank you" and a man moved nervously to the other side of the car.

It was the same all day. If it wasn't a recording telling me what to do it was a person saying something mechanical.

It was late when I got home so I climbed into the car and drove through a drive-in where you hang out the window and yell your order into a clown's mouth.

I drove up and waited for Jack to speak to me. Nothing happened. I opened my car door and kicked him, figuring he had a short in his mouth. Nothing. Finally, I threw my GOOD HUNTING IS SAFE HUNTING!

Hunting is more than a sport! It is a useful means of balancing wildlife populations. Game laws are established to preserve these balances, to insure a fair share for every hunter, and for the safety of all. No one wants hunting accidents to happen. They can be prevented.

- EVERY gun should be sighted in before you hunt with it. Always be sure the barrel is free of obstruction.
- CARRY only proper sized ammunition for the gun you're using. Accidentally loading with the wrong ammo can be serious trouble!
- UNLOAD gun before crossing fences or jumping ditches. It only takes a few seconds.
- GUNS must be unloaded and cased while transporting in a vehicle (Bows unstrung and cased).
- NEVER shoot a flat, hard surface or water. Ricochets can travel a mile.
- WEAR safe clothing — a bright orange is best. Avoid whites.
- STORE ammo separately from guns, out of reach of children and careless adults.
- WATCH the direction of the muzzle of your gun at all times. Be able to control it even if you stumble. Never point it at anything you don't intend to shoot.
- "HAIR TRIGGERS" are far more dangerous than accurate and should not be used.
- BE SURE of your target. Know what you're aiming at and never shoot unless you can see it clearly.
- TAKE time when you're aiming — you'll get better accuracy and more game.
- NEVER use a gun as a club! If you aim carefully, you'll get clean kills.
- NO TRESPASSING signs are the result of hunters who've abused the lands on which they've hunted. Respect the landowner, his land and property.
- THERE are no excuses for drinking before or while hunting!

Voice of Broadway

By JACK O'BRIAN

Tom O'Riordan is one of Ireland's major TV stars; he hosts an "intellectual quiz show" which hitchhikes its gray matter regularly into the No. 2 popularity spot in Eire's version of Nielsen surveys. Tony also has a different version of his show on Irish national radio; betimes a regular sports show and an archeological educational program. Tony was startled and charmed when he encountered a bit of our Manhattan Street Theater he didn't suspect happened at the core of our Big Apple; so we gave him a larger list than the single very capable musician he watched on a 5th Ave. corner.

We suggested Tony try the Air France office corner also on 5th Ave., where recently we enjoyed the music of "The New Rittenhouse Brass," a visiting Philadelphia classical brass quintet tooting virtuoso fanfares to help finance their studies at the Curtis Institute. They played chamber music — and ragtime, now assigned an even more respectful and respectable corner of the Curtis Institute's attention. Several days later we stopped to attend the sidewalk concert of a brace of young ladies fiddling classically away in a manner to make the late George Sokolsky quell in musically paternal fashion; columnist George loved string chamber music, notable Paganini which the two eager Julliard students were scraping so smartly.

Right in front of Nat Sherman's new smokeshop at 55th and 5th a French horn and oboe duo set up complementary shop, and for openers delivered a warmly tuneful "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes," for neighborly verisimilitude.

A more or less regular kilted institution at the church steps, 53rd and 5th is a bagpiper who like the other insinuates a subtly mannerly solicitation of contributions in his left-open music-bag on the walk.

Another Julliard student gives regular recitals for hours evenings in front of 666 5th Ave., a solo French hornist who toots that ill wind which only some blow good in down-right attractive, not objectionable style and tone.

But on 49th St. just west of 6th Ave., we watched in sadness a drab, filthily tattered and unwashed fellow plainly beyond the mental pale pounding quite proficiently in deliberate martial rhythms with two drumsticks, suggesting a once-successful percussion-professional now paradiddling to his own distortedly distant Sousa march.

Forty-Second St. between Times Square and 5th Ave. also beckons a large, strange assortment of itinerant musicians: one elderly gent in tattered clothing plays saxophone with a perfectly horrible tone and technique but with a pathetic earnestness that induces probably more tips than the more proficient street Heifetz and Van Cliburns.

A pretty fair black tenor sax soloist sits on a chair near the newspaper kiosk on 42nd St. delivering dependable Duke Ellington solos. An unhealthily plump lady reverently whines hymns in front of Bloomingdale's Lexington Ave. entrance, overflowing a tiny folding canvas seat. An accordionist squeezes pathetic melodies near the 58th St. & 3rd Ave. movie hub.

The musicians all seem to keep a sense of pride in working for their contributions; as does the dignified mackinaw-clad blind man who holds out pencils and cup in front of Tiffany's and Bonwit Teller on 5th Ave. He draws no resentful glances, only tenderly sympathetic concern as he rocks constantly in exercise-style to combat the possible atrophy of a long day in one unchanged vertical position — always careful of his Seeing Eye dog lying between his feet, one canine eye constantly alert for a possible pedestrian crashing into his master.

At 5th Ave. near 52nd St. and often down that 52nd St. block toward the elegant "21" club a short — five-one and two — beggar in foreign accent affects a pitifully persuasive tone and aspect, asking in two languages "Just enough to eat?" He has been in that prosperous area for 30 years that we've watched him: it's said he owns several apartment houses in a stylish neighborhood. We have seen him being picked up around midnight by a woman in a respectable sedan. Takes all kinds.

GONE: (Q.) I met this guy Lawrence. We went together for about two months. He told me he loved me. I began to fall in love with him. We talked a couple of times about getting married. Then he just up and left for about a month.

But he did come back. He talked to my stepmother. He asked her where I was. She told him I was visiting my mother. He told her he would be back. But he hasn't come back.

We were so much in love that we had sex together, which seemed to bring us closer together.

We never had a fight. We were always so happy just being together. Now I would like to know if you think Lawrence was just using me. I'm 17. He's 23.

Hurting in Alabama (A.) If you mean did Lawrence do all that just for sex, my answer is no. I don't believe he did. It was something that happened to both of you.

It did not hit him so hard as it did you. But he was touched. He enjoyed being with you.

It is possible that he feels guilty, or that some other girl has distracted him. If you know where he is, call him and remind him that you are still there.

"TROUBLE": (Q.) My mother and my father won't let me see my friends because they are older than I am and they say all they are is "trouble." My friends get blamed for everything that happens. But they don't even do the things they are accused of. They are called "wild" by my parents just because they ride and do stunts on cycles. I think that's wrong to judge people they don't even know.

Two of my friends will be 15 and one 16 years old. I am almost 13. Please help.

Lonely in Pennsylvania (A.) Many parents misjudge teen-agers because of dress or hair length or musical preferences or other interests, such as motorbikes.

Your parents should be more reasonable.

But so should you. You should make other friends your age. With friends like that, you will not be lonely.

And I am confident that if you made a few real friends of your own age your parents wouldn't be so unreasonable about your seeing your older friends occasionally.

(Have a problem? Write to Dr. Jean Adams, care of The Pocono Record, P.O. Box 2402, Houston, Texas, 77001. Because so many write, Dr. Adams cannot answer you personally. But she will answer readers' questions in Teen Forum daily.)
